FRIDAY MORNING

VOLUME 17 — SIKESTON, SCOTT COUNTY, MISSOURI — FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 21, 1929 — NUMBER 76

HERCULANEUM WANTS REVENGE HERE SUN.

Puffed up with ten victories out of eleven starts this season, and smarting under the one single defeat administered last Sunday by Flat River the Herculaneum team will visit Sikeston this Sunday afternoon to try a avenge the defeat handed them last year by the locals. The game will be called at 2:45 o'clock.

The Thomas-DeRousse battery of the visitors is known to Sikeston players and fans as a dangerous combination, both being veterans in their places. Thomas was offered a large sum to pitch one game here last summer for the locals, but could not break his contract with Herculaneum. The visitors will place Horn in right field, McCoy at second, Defoni in the hot corner, Rapp at short, Masterson at first and Yesberg, Partney, at left and center field. Baker, Francis and Broombaugh form the reserve.

There is a possibility of ringing in a "dark horse" hurler for the locals, according to Tom Malone; but so long as Homer Burrus is able to deliver like he did last Sunday against Cambria, he will be used.

Thomas may catch for the locals Sunday in event that Byron Bowman is out of town. The rest of the lineup remains unchanged.

The Memphis U. S. Engineers will visit Sikeston Sunday, June 30.

TALLEY UNDER $10,000 BOND, TRIAL JULY 3

Poplar Bluff, June 19.—Levy Talley of Sikeston, held in connection with the robbery Saturday night of the postoffice at Hunterville, was ordered held under $10,000 bond today when arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Freer. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for July 3.

Two other men who took part in the holdup have not been arrested but postal inspectors expect to locate them within a few days, it was said here today.

Three men entered the M. P. Estes store at Hunterville Saturday night and took about $400, a part of which was postal receipts. Estes is also posptmaster, the postoffice being located in the store building.

MAN KILLED ON WAY TO CEMETERY

East Prairie, June 18.—Alex Lewis 33 years old, was killed at 9:30 o'clock this morning, when a truck he was driving at a fast rate turned over two miles north of here on Highway 55 and threw him on the concrete breaking his neck. According to Harold Handler, who was a short distance behind Lewis, the front wheel got off the concrete half of the highway and skidded on the graveled half.

Lewis, who was working for a local undertaking company, was on his way to the Oak Grove Cemetery with a coffin case. It is said that this was the fifth serious accident to happen in the past few months on the stretch where Lewis was killde.

Surviving him are his wife and mother, who reside in this place; a brother, Charles Lewis, lives at Sikeston, and another brother, Steve Lewis, lives at East Prairie.

He was a World War Veteran. Funeral arrangements have not been made yet.

Cape Lineman Dies Of Burns

WARNS INVESTORS IN FUR FARMING

An effort will soon be made in this city, we are informed, to sell units of stock in a proposed Muskrat Farm near Cape Girardeau. Announcement of the fact that such a project was contemplated, came through the Southeast Missourian, daily paper of Cape Girardeau in which announcement, the promoters assured prospects of returns amounting to 1200 per cent and more. Not one item of editorial comment, and no mention in the news colum of that paper has been noted to date regarding the reliability of its promoters, the organization and backing of the co poration, or the legality of the proposed scheme.

Last week this office was visited by P. A. McAllister, stock salesman who outlined the plan, and assured this office that when the time cam advertising space would be purchased to "sell" Sikeston investors on this scheme. The gentleman called the office again this week, and objected strenuously to a small item carried in the Man About Town column which made light of the proposed get-rich-quick scheme. Mr. McAllister cautioned this office to be careful of its statements and to "investigate the money making possibilities of fur farming before broadcasting harmful statements".

In accordance with this request, and with the best interests of prospective Standard investors in mind, this paper did wire for full information on fur farming, and more especially for information as to the reliability, and business standing of the Ozark Fur Farms, Inc., of which Mr. McAllister is a member.

We present the findings with no malice toward Mr. McAllister, as stated in a letter of June 19 from the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis as follows:

"I have your inquiry regarding the Ozark Fur Sales, Inc., Ambassador Building, St. Louis, in connection with which a P. A. McAllister is soliciting stock sales or sales of units including a pair of muskrats and stock for $300 in the city of Cape Girardeau.

I note what you state about his intentions of visiting Sikeston later

You are advised that our efforts to secure any information along the lines of the experience of the men operating the Ozark Fur Traders, Inc. 1212 Ambassador Bldg., have met with no success. A visit to their office resulted in their stating they were not yet ready to issue any information. That was followed by a letter asking certain specific questions which has not been answered. That letter was dated May 8, 1929. They were at that time trying to sell their stock in St. Louis.

Certain of the individuals connected with this organization are known to be stock salesman—I do not mean stock bearing fur. None of the men are known to have had any experience whatever in raw fur growing and if they have connected with anyone with experience in this line, we have not learned of it.

All of the incorporators are residents of St. Louis Hotels, and according to the records of the Secretary of State, are as follows: G. M. Noonan, Gatesworth Hotel; P. A McAllister Robert E. Lee Hotel and J. Kent, Roberts E. Lee Hotel. The Robert E Lee Hotel is located in the downtown section of St. Louis.

The firm was incorporated as Ozark Fur Traders, Inc., April 6th 1929, State of Missouri, but at that time had no permit or had it made application to sell securities in this State. I am at this time checking again with the Finance Commissioner to ascertain whether or not stcok sales privileges have been secured and you will be advised further when I receive a reply.

I wish to call your attention to United States Government booklet issued as leaflet No. 27, by the Department of Agriculture, which you can get without charge from your Congressman. Particularly you should read the first page, which, among other statements, contains the following:

Large returns are easily predicted or promised to prospective investors on an abnormally high rate of dividends or on large pelt profits. Heavy risks usually accompany such lures. Too often they are the chief talking points of financial charlatans. Promoters know that the names and endorsements successful men carry weight, and often use these without authorizations.

The promoter who tries to impress the prospective investor by tabulating the fabulous returns supposed to have been realized in the early stages of fur farming from investment in a pair of foxes unwittingly admits that his offering cannot stand on its own feet. Such figures fire the imagination, but they are generally deceptive. They are not a true index to the profits to be expected from any new enterprise into which the small investor is urged to put his money.

You should, of course, read the entire booklet described, which is entitled "Recommendations to Beginners in Fur Farmin". Any Congressman will be glad to have you provide with a copy without cost, on request.

Should anything further develop in connection with this particular organization, you will be furnished with a copy of our report.

Sincerely,

W. C. ROSENBAUM,
Special Representative.

P. S: Since dictating the above, have telegram from Securities Commissioner Stockard at Jefferson City, of June 19, 1929, stating company has no permit to sell its units or shares under the Blue Sky Laws of Missouri.

SOLDIERS LOSE TO OIL MEN 9 TO 4

One error, a wild pitch, in the fourth inning is credited by the losing Co. K team for the 9 to 4 score rolled up by the Oil Men last Monday evening. Up to the fourth frame, the soldier team led four to one, and everything seemed rosy. The Oil men batted around in the fourth, however, and scored six runs after two men had been downed, and before the last out, retired the side. Seven runs came in during the batting spree, which added to one in the first, and one in the fifth totaled nine tallies to four for the soldiers.

The Company K boys found Wilmuth, hurler for the Oil Men in the first for two hits and one run, Dudley scoring the lone talley. Neil scored in the second on Kirby's sacrifice hit, and Dudley and Weekley crossed the plate in the third for the last two scores.

Kindred started the fireworks for the John D team by rapping Neil for a triple in the first inning. He scored on a single by Homer Burrus. The Oilers fell victims to easy putouts in the next two innings, but came back strong in the fourth, when seven scores crossed the home plate.

TRAIN JUMPS TRACK DELAYED 4 HOURS

The fast Sunnyland, pride of the St. Louis division of the Frisco Lines, was delayed about four hours Tuesday evening, when Engineer Curtis failed to observe an open switch north of the station and the engine and two trucks on the tender jumped off the track. A wrecking crew from the Chaffee shops were called immediately after the accident, which occurred at 6:00 o'clock, and arrived here after nine o'clock. Forty-five minutes work resulted in getting the locomotive back on the rails, and the belated Sunnyland and a group of tired passengers finally departed for Memphis and points south around 10:30.

Tom Malone, passenger agent here explained Wednesday, that at an interlocking switch such as the one used by the Missouri Pacific and Frisco, the blocks are always set against incoming trains. It has been customary, however, to have the line clear for the Sunnyland from 15 minutes to half an hour before train time, and the trains instead of coming to a full stop, and whistling for a clear board, have been accustomed to slowing down and rolling into the station The tower man was busy Tuesday evening, and failed to clear the line at the usual time, and engineer Curtis alone is to blame for not observing the signal.

The fireman on this train, however, noticed the block, and called to Curtis as the latter pulled the whistle cord for clearance. The engineer applied brakes as soon as he realized the trouble, and succeeded in keeping all coaches on the track. Passengers claimed that they felt two distinct shocks, one when the engine left the rails, and one when the train was suddenly halted when brakes were applied.

Curtis drove the train on to Memphis, despite the predictions of hundreds of Sikeston spectators, who declared that he would be relieved of his job immediately.

EXAMPLE SET BY MOTHERS IS RULED MORE VALUABLE THAN GAINING REVENGE

The peace, dignity and good will of residents living at the corner of North Street and North Handy is again restored, this time by order of the Court.

Several days ago charges were filed by Mrs. Rose Orbison, charging that Mrs. Helton, a neighbor, struck the nine-year-old Orbison child, and counter charges of disturbing the peace were at once entered by Mrs. Helton against Mrs. Orbison. The affair was aired before Judge Myers Tuesday afternoon, who handled the situation so that good will instead of constant friction and ill will might be maintained in that neighborhood.

Both women were fined $10 and costs, and in each case the fine and costs were stayed on condition that each make an effort to live peacably with the other. The court pointed out that both women had children dependent upon them for physical support, instruction and guidance in social living and that the example set by the respective mothers would have great influence upon the children involved.

'COUSIN ED' NAMED FOR POSTMASTER

Following several months of examinations, political log rolling County Committee meetings, and handshaking Cousin Ed Hollingsworth was named last Wednesday evening by the Republican County Committee in session at Benton as the successful candidate for the postmastership of Sikeston. The defeated candidates were Howard Morrison and Frank E. Mount. Fifteen of the sixteen county committeemen were present at the meeting Wednesday night and concurred in the recommendation.

Immediately after the announcement, Ed Turminstein, County Republican chairman, handed Mr. Hollingsworth a telegram to Congressman Dewey Short, stating the recommendation of the County Committee Congressman Short will now instruct the Postmaster General at Washington, who will in turn, carry the recommendation as a matter of routine to President Herbert Hoover, who will later receive the confirmation of the appointment from the Senate.

If the recommendation is favorably received by Congressman Short, Mr. Hollingsworth will take office immediately.

The defeated candidate, Howard Morrison, will declare himself a candidate for the unexpired term of City Collector now held by Hollingsworth A special election will decide this matter if the new postmaster takes his post within two months; after that time, the City Council may appoint a collector.

S. E. MO. TOURNEY TO BE HELD JUNE 30

This championship match has no effect on the round robin tourney now going on, and will be participated in by clubs from the following towns, Poplar Bluff, Sikeston, Cape Girardeau, Charleston and Farmington.

A qualifying match of all players of the five towns of Southeast Missouri will be held previous to the tournament and the 12 men from each town that have the lowest scores will participate in the tournament at Poplar Bluff and Cape Girardeau.

The 12 players will be divided in three classes according to their scores. The first four players with the lowest score will be placed in the championship class, the next four in Class A and the last four in Class B.

NO TURNOUT FOR WEST ROUTE MEETING TUESDAY

G. B. Greer, chairman of the West route committee, waited in vain for interested parties to show up at the meeting scheduled to be held Tuesday afternoon at the City Hall. He explained the lack of interest in terms of farm work, saying that those who might be expected to take part in securing the right-of-way were now engaged in harvesting wheat.

Mr. Greer stated later that he would select a small committee, probably four or five, and personally oversee getting the right-of-way to Kluge's Hill signed up.

After the harvest this fall business in every branch should be good. Of course, after interest and taxes have been paid, there will not be so much money left, but there is not a house, barn or outbuilding in this trade territory that does not need to be repaired and painted. Furniture, bedding and wearing apparel in country and town alike needs replenishing. The mules, the farm implements and fences are played out and must be replaced. With all these things so badly needed, those who owe past due bills to the merchant, should not forget that he has been badly cramped for lack of money to carry on, and should pay him part of what they owe. The cloth has got to be cut pretty close to cover all the needs and save the credit. May the season continue good and the harvests be the best in many years.

For a long period of years Henry Welsh has bragged on the wonderful ball players they had up around Festus, Crystal City, Herculaneum and other cities, but when he sponsored the team last year that came down from the hills and was so badly beaten, Henry was almost sick abed He now says the team coming Sunday is the real Herculaneum team and is coming for revenge. Go out and see them beaten again.

The Standard management wishes to express its appreciation for consideration given our solicitors who have been calling on its readers the past week collecting back subscriptions and soliciting new ones. The results have been very satisfactory considering the scarcity of money. Instructions were given these solicitors to be considerate and use no strong-arm tactics in their attempts to collect, but to call again after wheat harvest that may suit some better.

SPEED OF BUSSES HELD AT 40 M. P. R.

A speed limit of forty miles an hour is being enforced on all passenger motorbusses in Missouri, the public service commission announced.

"The commission is determined that a speed of forty mles an hour shall be the limit", the commission said. "All motor busses must come to a stop before crossing a railroad track. Rules of the road must be maintained and all motor bus equipment must be kept in good mechanical condition".

Every effort is being made to eliminate the "outlaw" or wildcat bus operator, the commission said.

"The Commission appointed a motor bus inspector in January, and the records of the Public Service Commission show that the number of accidents by busses on the highways outside the cities has been reduced to almost the vanishing point. Accidents that have occurred during the present year were not of a serious character and were in some instances cause by the carelessness of the private automobile operator. There have been no deaths by motor bus accidents in Missouri since the motor bus inspector was appointed and fewer complaints are received by the commission relative to infraction of the rules of the commission and the law of the State than were formerly received.

"If the bus is delayed enroute, or is unable to start on schedule time, the commission has instructed all motor carriers that under no condition should an attempt be made to make up lost time. The Public Service Commission desires to warn the traveling public to beware of the out-law or wild-cat motor carrier. All persons who desire to secure passage by bus should examine the outside of the bus to ascertain if the letters 'P. S. C. Mo.', together with the number, are painted on the side. Such painting indicates that the operator of that particular bus has deposited with the Public Service Commission a liability insurance policy covering all accidents that may happen to the bus or its passengers. There is no assurance that such protetcion is afforded by busses engaged in intra-State traffic that do not have such marking."

CHIEF COUNSEL FOR MISSOURI HIGHWAY COMMISSION RESIGNS

Jefferson City, June 18.—Edgar Shook, chief counsel for the Missouri Highway Commission, today resigned effective July 15, to become associated with a Kansas City law firm. In his new position Shook will be in charge of legal work in connection with the acquisition of the site for the proposed lake and hydroelectric power dam on the Osage River near Bagnell.

Shook has been chief counsel for the commission since February 1 1928, succeeding Lue Lozier of Carrollton. Prior to that time he was chief assistant to Lozier for two years. He is a graduate of the law school of the University of Missouri a World War veteran and practiced law in Marshall, Mo., before his connection with the highway department.

The highway commission is meeting here today, but has not selected a successor to Shook.

MISSISSIPPI COUNTY FARM BUREAU NEWS

Missouri is authorized to send 34 outstanding 4-H Club delegates to the Mid-South Fair to be held at Memphis, Tenn., September 28 to October 5, according to T. T. Martin, State Club Agent. This authorization comes from Frank D. Fuller, secretary-manager of the Fair.

Of these delegates, 16 will be selected from the State at large and 18 will be chosen from Southeastern Missouri Counties as follows: Two each from Butler, Dunklin, Pemiscot, Cape Girardeau, Jackson, Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi and Stoddard.

The delegates chosen will be housed and cared for free of cost during their stay in Memphis, and will have an opportunity to take part in all Club camp activities, tours and contests of the 4-H Club Department.

The selection of the two club members to represent Mississippi County at the Mid-South Fair will be made the first of September. The method of making this selection will be announced later, according to the County Agent.

Although the poultry flock owner who pays close attention to the production of eggs during the year, will have occasion to cull his flocks almost every month, the real culling season actually begins the later part of June and continues through October, according to the County Agent.

To the inexperienced flock owner, the mid and late summer season is a time in which it is not difficult to distinguish between poor lawers or loafers and good layers by means of external body characteristics. This applies to chickens which are reasonably well fed on both grain and mash containing proper amounts of protein, and does not apply to chickens which are allowed to range for their food and pick up what they can.

In the latter case, it is difficult for even the experienced poultrymen to determine accurately the ability of the average hen to produce eggs during the summer months.

Although there are always exceptions to the rule, in general, it has been found that the hen which lays consistently throughout the summer until early fall, molts late in the season and grows a new set of feathers rapidly at molting time, is the most productive type of hens to keep on the farm. The early molter is usually a bird which lays very rarely in winter time and will not produce consistently during the hot weather months.

Birds which are inclined to go broody at frequent intervals, should also be discriminated against, because every broody spell means a loss of egg production for a period of 7 to 14 days.

Culling demonstrations will be held at different points in Mississippi County by County Agent Teal thruout the summer months for the purpose of instructing folks in the practice of distinguishing between good and poor lyaers. Folks desiring to have their flocks culled may secure the services of the County Agent free of charge if they will advertise the affair as a demonstration and invite neighbors to attend for purposes of instruction.

The first demonstration on culling and to dip chickens for the purpose of destroying lice was held at the farm of S. A. Presson, Wednesday morning.

From the 70,000,000 pounds of free nitrogen in the air, over every acre of land, an average acre of inocuated legumes will take from 5 to 125 lbs of nitrogen annually and will store it in the plants and roots where it will be available for use, according to Ide P. Trotter, Crops Extension Specialist, Missouri College of Agriculture

Every day evidence before the eyes of Mississippi County farmers should convince them of this point. Small quantities of manure in wheat or corn fields, the presence of heavy dark green clumps of wheat in fields used for watermelon production the previous year, or the noticeable growth of a crop following the plowing under of green material are concrete evidences available this year to prove need for more nitrogenous organic matter.

The nitrogen element in any mixed fertilizer is the most expensive type of fertilizer to buy. If, by growing legume crops, the purchase of nitrogen, sacked in burlap bags can be avoided, a district saving can be affected and consequently a greater profit can be realized.

For Mississippi County, the crops which are able to take nitrogen from the air if the roots of said crops are inoculated, are alfalfa, sweet clover soybeans, cowpeas, red clover, alsike clover, lespedeza and vetch. There are other legumes, but those mentioned above are commonly known and frequently found in the agricultural systems of Missouri farmers.

In the process of growing soybeans, or cowpeas in wheat in Mississippi County this year, it would be desirable, thinks the County Agent, for farmers to consider seriously the plowing under in the green stage, of at least a portion of the crop for soil improvement purposes. This suggestino is made with the full understanding that the need of harvesting for seed is imperative in some cases, and cutting for hay is also essential where no other hay crop is available.

Does the Shoe Fit?

"I once knew a farmer", said the fence corner philosopher, "who didn't believe in co-operation or organization.

"He took his stuff to market, tho', over a road that was built through the combined efforts of his neighbors his county, State and nation.

"He sent his children to a school made possible through co-operation.

"He occasionally went to a church built and supported by an organization.

"He purchased union-made overalls, and had his whiskers trimmed in a union barber shop and his machinery was made by union labor.

"When he sold his crops, the men who purchased them took out a percentage to pay their dues to their various trade associations.

His wife took her butter and eggs to a town where the grocers' association all paid the same price and the chewing tobacco she brought back home to him all carried union label and was grown by co-operatives.

The minister who preached the funeral sermon belonged to the Ministerial Association.

"His casket was made by union labor and he was buried through the co-oeration of his neighbors.

"Yet this man never believed in co-operation among farmers, or the possibility of benefits to be derived from organized groups of the class to which he belonged".

SEVEN DROWN WHEN PLANE FALLS IN SEA

Folkstone, England, June 17.—Seven passengers of the Giant Imperial Airways liner City of Ottawa plunged to their deaths in the English Channel three miles off Dungeness today. Only partial identification had been made tonight and it was feared that one American was among them. Another American, Homer W. Tatham, escaped, and told a graphic story of the plunge of the huge aircraft.

There were 13 aboard the ship including Pilot Captain Brailli and Mechanic W. S. Barnett. They had left Croydon for Paris this morning.

A short way from shore the plane was seen to waver and turn back and then strike the water. The pilot had exerted every resource to bring his plane as near as possible to a Belgian trawler, the crew of which was able to rescue four passengers, the pilot and mechanic.

HOT SPRINGS MAN FOUND DEAD IN SLOUGH NEAR BLUFF

Poplar Bluff, June 18.—Mystery surrounds the death of C. H. Danphine, 65, of Hot Springs, Ark., whose lifeless body was found in a slough on the branch of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, two miles east of here this morning.

Identification of the body was made by Coroner Grover Greer through letters found on his person. He had been visiting a sister, Mrs. Edith Harbour, at Springfield, Ill., and was making his way back to the home of his daughter at Hot Springs.

Examination of the body revealed that the body had been dead about four hours. The only mark on the body was a broken jawbone. The man did not drown, the coroner said, but was dead when he fell or was thrown into the marsh.

Coroner Greer is of the opinion the man either fell from a freight train or he was killed by hoboes and thrown out of a freight car of a passing train. The latter theory seems to be more plausible, Greer intimated.

Plans for an inquest are waiting arrival of two daughters at Hot Springs, Ark. They are Mrs. Adeline Gasbane and Mrs. Lena Gasberry.

WRECK IS TAKEN TO ST. LOUIS TUESDAY

The badly burned Hupmobile "8" which passed through Sikeston Tuesday, formerly belonged to Miss Lula Sparks. The fine auto was kept on the Sparks farm until about three weeks ago, when a small barn used as a combination garage and feed storage place caught fire and burned. Cause of the fire is not known. The remains of the Hup were taken to St. Louis by a wrecker from that city.

CHARGES FILED IN CAPE GIRARDEAU SHOOTING SCRAPE

Cape Girardeau, June 18.—Charges of assault with intent to kill will be filed against Earl Peavy and James T. Munson and his wife. Held following the shooting of Officer Robert Wilson early Sunday. Both Wilson and Peavey, shot by the officers aides are expected to recover. Information from Edwardsville, Ill., today to Police Chief H. F. Wickham, is that Peavey has an alias, Earl Young, and that he is a parole violator from the Pontiac, Ill., reformatory. The shooting took place when officers were called to the scene of home burglaries, Peavey and the Munsons having some of the stolen articles in their possession.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS FROM COMMERCIAL APPEAL

A touch of color at the White House will not make the whole nation kin.

The steam roller of the House of Representatives surelly put the bent in debentures.

We suppose that Mary Booze is now awaiting her invitation to the next White House function.

And they said Mrs. Alfred Smith was unfit socially to preside over functions at the executive mansion.

It might be advisable to drop the "white" from the White House now that the de Priest tea party has added another tint.

After eating some of the Chinese dishes that are served as delicacies one can hardly blame the natives of that land for turning cannibal.

President Hoover, after being the beneficiary of an issue that broke the solid south, is in a fair way to restore and to increase that solidity.

A headline reads: "Hoover's Week-End Is Spoiled by Rain". It's not that bad. It will dry out, as many others who have had fisherman's luck can attest.

Despite his claim that the Hoover administration has not fulfilled its promises to the farmers, who doubts that Senator Borah, if there were an election tomorrow, would be the most zealous supporter of that administration?

The apologists for the exhibition of of social equality in the White House aggravate rather than palliate the offense when they say Mrs. Hoover had no choice but to invite to tea the wife of the Chicago negro vice overlord and now Congressman Oscar de Priest.

This paragraph is not political. Ever since the establishment of independence of the United States, it has been the practice of the occupants of the White House to, at some time, hold Congressional receptions to which Congressmen and their wives were received at the White House. The Hoovers were but following this custom and when the wife of the colored member presented herself, there was nothing else to do but receive her. There have been colored members of Congress before, but this is the first instance that is recalled when any of them responded to the invitation. It is the belief of The Standard editor that the Hoovers are just as far from believing in social equality of the races as any fire-eating Southerner, but they are not private individuals and are servants of the people and in line with past precedents, were imposed upon by the De Priests. Many caustic paragraphs will be shot at the Hoovers over this incident and we have an idea may encourage the attempt of other social equality stunts as the De Priest entertainment tonight in Washington to which all Republican members but two were invited.

If a person be innocent of crime, why should he run when an officer starts to arrest him, or pick him up for investigation. Innocent people do not fear investigations but law violators know they are guilty and fear the proof is at hand, hence, take to their heels.

It will be all right here, if Mr. Hoover will order the equal rights bill enforced in those Southern States that voted for him last fall. All he will have to do is to give instructions to U. S. Marshals to see that negroes are admitted to all hotels, restaurants, churches and theatres—then watch the undertakers get busy with negro funerals.

• • • •

We suppose our Mr. Dewey Short, white, will be among the social lions who will attend the function given by Oscar De Priest, black, at the auditorium in Washington, D. C., tonight. Birds of a feather will flock together.

It might be well to suggest that the next mixed reception held at the White House during the hot summer time, that the decoration consist of dog fennel and "jimson" weeds as they have an aroma that might offset the smell from some of the guests present.

Regardless of whether your nerves are shot, whether you wish to cure the smoke habit, curb desire for strong drink, or learn how to mix your own, clip the coupon. Want to be a lawyer, cartoonist, banker, mechanic, radio operator, be cured without the knife or stop suffering from a truss—clip the coupon. If you are not up on how to nurse babies in three parts by Miss So-and-Such, clip the coupon and get a thorough treatise on the subject. If you are unable to interest your husband, or if you do not know what every young man or woman should be familiar with, clip the coupon. It may be that your mind needs broadening, or that you can't sleep nights, or perhaps you would like to know how to find buried treasure, nowadays one needs only clip the coupons and spend from ten to twenty minutes to succeed.

There are 131 holidays on the Mexican calendar of business. Perhaps that is why so many American business men are anxious to get established in the country of perpetual revolutions.

The world's all wet to our way of thinking, and that's litterally spoken also, while in parts of China the natives are suffering from an unusual drought.

Natives of Peru of Afghanistan not to mention posterity might well believe that we Americans live by clipping coupons. No matter what the subject, object or what-not, clip the coupon and settle the matter once and for all the time. If you do not know whether artichokes are vegetables or fish, or whether they are to be eaten or gargled, clip the coupon "and we'll send our 178-page bookles—" Here's another, "Now I understand why we never have anything—it was your big chance and you never opened your mouth", the young man is getting royally bawled out by his better half because he failed to clip the coupon. Had he done so, 20 minutes a day would have converted the most inarticulate dumb one into a polished after dinner speaker. Another twenty-minutes, he would have had a trained memory with a gymnastic will-power and unlimited personality; but he failed to clip the coupon.

By wrapping your winter things in newspapers, we cannot guarantee against theft by robbers, but practical assurance that garments will not be visited by moths can be given. Moths hate printer's ink for some reason or other.

The latest Franklin auto ads feature a bathing beauty attired or rather disrobed in one of the newest of the new sun tan, backless, frontless and skirtless bathing suits. Very appropriate this, both are air-cooled.

It happened at one of the exclusive Hollywood beach parties. Those who were on the in in suggested to those who wanted to join the party, that said parties of the second part furnish their own liquor. Story has it that Betty Compson brought Richard Barthelmess. Think that over.

The male mosquito will not bite, says an expert. Henceforth, we will be governed accordingly. In the words of the immortal So-and-So "first be sure you're right, my son. Then forge ahead", and if it happens to be a lady mosquito, our motto is going to be "Go West, young lady, go West".

Crooks, robbers, bandits and moths fear newspapers. The former dislike publicity ,and the latter printers' ink. Thus again is the power of the press vindicated.

To make life interesting it becomes almost necessary to find interest in the uninteresting, vital facts in the non-essential, and good in all men, for the greater part of our lives must necessarily be spent, it seems, among those who we first consider uninteresting, and non-essential—to our well being and happiness.

The office crew, or part of it, were guests of Editor Blanton at the evening session of the Southeast Missouri Press Association meeting at Bloomfield last Friday night. The fried chicken at the banquet was good, the church seats comfortable and the lecturers entertaining and instructive.

It is good occasionally to reach the rarified air of one who has tasted success in one's chosen profession, journalism in this case. We believe the group which heard Dean Walter Wliliams carried away thoughts and ideals of perfection which will sustain the individuals when they are in the midst of the every-day affairs of publishing a newspaper.

This, said the man with the hoe in a cotton patch, is the kind of weather when I'd like to hunt a nice shade tree, and every once in a while nibble on some rye bread and cheese, and more often than that, take a stiff swig out of a foaming jug of cool beer.

Oyez, Oyez, but alas, we have no beer near; all we have is near beer.

DENIES BIRDS POINT FLOODWAY EVER O. K'D

Expressing the view that final approval of the Bird Point floodway in Southeast Missouri had never been given by President Coolidge, which is directly contrary to the generally accepted view, W. H. Dick, president of the Mississippi River Flood Control Association, with headquarters in Memphis, has asked lower valley representatives in Congress to raise this point while the legal status of the project is being studied by the attorney general of the United States.

The project, which would throw some 150,000 acres of rich farm lands into a flowage basin during emergencies, involving the construction of a large amount of levees, is halted pending solution of legal questions raised by property owners in the area. President Hoover recently asked Attorney General William D. Mitchell for advice on legal questions involved in the valley's flood problems and the Bird Point matter is expected to be brought in although it previously had been conceded that President Coolidge had approved it in full.

"I do not agree that the President has ever accepted the engineering report on the floodway", Mr. Dick has advised several congressmen active in flood control legislation.

"The act of Congress for the control of floods on the Mississippi River gave the engineering board the power only to consider the engineering differences between the adopted or Jadwin project and the plans recommended by the Mississippi River Commission and 'to recommend to the President such action as it may deem necessary in respect to such engineering differences and the decision of the President upon all recommendations or questions submitted to him by such board shall be followed in carrying out the project herein adopted. The board shall not have any power or authority in respect to such project except as herein provided'.

"It is clear that the cost of flowage rights or the cost of land on which to construct engineering works has nothing whatever to do with the engineering plans and is purely a matter of economics.

"Therefore, when the President gave a qualified approval to the engineering recommendations in relation to the Bird Point spillway it was evidently his purpose to give that approval provided the flowage rights and the lands for levee right-of-way could be secured at a price which he would afterward fix, and if these lands could not be secured at these prices suggested by him, then it seems clear that his approval of the project is withheld.

"If, on the other hand, as it seems clear, the President had no authority to suggest the basis for arriving at values of flowage rights and of land in fee simple, the procedure for arriving at these values being fixed in the law, it may be said that his ruling as to flowage rights and land values made December 11, 1928, is void and the determination of these values is left as is provided elsewhere in the law".—Commercial Appeal.

Louisville, June 15.—Ray Le Grande Riley of Sacramento, controller of the State of California, was today elected president of the International Association of Lions Clubs at the thirteenth annual convention here. He takes office immediately, succeeding Ben A. Ruffin of Richmond, Va., as head of the second largest service organization in the world, with 1840 clubs and 70,000 members in every State of the Union, and every province of Canada, and in China Mexico Cuba and Hawaii.

Mr. Riley is descended from pioneers of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. He was born at Vicksburg Mich., was educated there, and at the age of 17 was a licentiate in pharmacy. He was a pharmacist in Michigan, and later at Dillon, Mont., and Colton, Calif., until ten years ago.

Mr. Riley has also rendered long and faithful service in Lionism. After serving as a club president, he was elected district governor of California, and in 1923 was chosen on the board of international directors. He was elected third vice-president in 1926, second vice in 1927, first vice in 1928, and now president.

It has been about 70 years since the great chain food store system was organized in this country.

The Girl Who Came Back

By Jack Woodford

CHAPTER VIII

Without further words Warrill stepped forward and took her into his arms. Desperately Lolita fought off the desire to remain there. His arms were big and strong, and he was just tall enough so that her head lay nicely upon his shoulder; after a second she pushed him away with a mighty shove and stood back, her face flaming, trembling from head to foot. Warrill looked at her in surprise.

"Why, what's the matter with you?" he asked in astonishment. For a moment she did not reply. His eyes were filled with frank desire. Lolita a little vainly reflected that if she had ever seen her fresh young beauty reflected in a man's eyes she saw it so reflected now. That there was color in her cheeks after her brisk walk she knew; and that the last few weeks had taken the anxious, pinched look from her face she also knew. For a moment she was glad of the beauty that was hers, and then again it came to her that it was, after all, hardly more than a curse, for it was forever making life hard for her to live.

She walked over and sat down in a chair, motioned for him to be seated. He slumped down into a chair and lit a cigarette. After a moment she said directly:

She Walked Over and Sat Down in a Chair.

"I understand that you are engaged to marry Miss Pringle." He started, and before he could think a second time ejaculated:

"How did you know? Why, it was only last night that I—"

"Only last night that you became engaged; yet you come here, to my room, tonight. What sort of a man are you?"

Under this biting question he remained for a moment silent.

"Lolita," he began slowly, "surely you, of all persons, can afford to exhibit a little patient understanding when it comes to the vagaries of others. Surely your own experiences with life have been nothing to entitle you to condemn airily without trying to understand motives. I love you, and I do not love Miss Pringle—and yet I am going to marry her. Although she works on a newspaper, it is only as a sort of lark. She is tremendously wealthy; or at least her parents are; she will inherit it all some day."

"I think," gasped Lolita, "that you're despicable. Even if you do not consider me in the matter at all, much as I personally dislike Miss Pringle, I should certainly not wish to see you break her heart by marrying her for her money. I wish that you would please go."

"How can you take such a position?" Warrill objected angrily. "Look at the things you've been involved in, you—"

"I did make one terrible mistake, it is true; but my whole life since then has been, and shall always be, an effort to wipe that out and make up for it in every way possible. I should think that you, of all persons, would be big enough and broad enough to help and not hinder me in my effort to come back."

"I was not thinking of your first mistake, I was thinking of your second one—the gentleman you speak of as Gray Eyes."

"But he's nothing—"

"Naturally you'd say so. And I do believe that he is nothing to you now, but he must have been at some time, although he, too, takes the more than a little absurd position that his interest in you is purely altruistic. Frankly, I don't believe either him or yourself in this connection, and you might as well know it soon as late."

"Then the reason you're going to marry Miss Pringle is that you believe me to be involved in some sort of an affair with Gray Eyes?"

"No, that's not the reason."

"When it's because of my former—"

"No, that isn't it, either. You are in no way to blame; it's just my own sheer cussedness." He seemed a little uncertain of his course now, a little ashamed of himself. Lolita leaned forward sympathetically.

"Tell me all about it, Mr. Warrill," she begged.

"Well," he began, heartened by her tone, "it's like this. Please try to understand. I have been, as you know, for some years writing for the magazines. I'm getting nowhere. The stuff that I write is cheap commercial drivel, written for a price. I can do better than that, I know. I want a chance to do the very best work that I am capable of, and by marrying Miss Pringle I can do it. She has promised me that I shall not have to worry over financial considerations at all. I shall have a big study to work in, infinite time, and no responsibilities; no necessity for turning out cheap stuff in order to make a living; no necessity for writing advertising copy for the papers that advertise theaters by way of so-called play reviews. Do you see my point? Last night I thought that I would give up the idea, and marry, but, but—" She stopped him.

"Yes, I do," returned Lolita slowly; "I think that you are hopeless. Much as I care for you, I cannot help but think less of you now."

"But you're perfectly silly. Why should you think less of me? You're taking a sentimental view of this whole thing. Your mind is full of the contemporary cant in this country; the French, with their broader contemplation of the moralities, would think nothing of such an arrangement; and, besides, it will be a help to you. I love you, and shall always love you more than anyone else in the world. This will give me a chance to be of some help to you, too, while you are learning to write. I can help you financially, after I've married Miss Pringle."

"Do you think for one minute I'd accept such help from you under those circumstances?"

"You accepted it from Gray Eyes, did you not?"

"But that's very different."

"Different. I think it is much worse, considering the fact that you do not love him. Either way, considering that, you are doing something very small. If you do not intend to make him any return for his money, you are cheating him; if you do intend to, you are lowering yourself, since you admittedly do not love him."

"Then you think that if I let you help me financially, and made some sort of return to you, considering the fact that we love each other, it would be all right, despite Miss Pringle, despite the conventions, despite all of the decencies?"

"There is another phase to the thing, Lolita, that you overlook. We are artists, and therefore not to be bound down by the ordinary conventions that the herd observes. The greatest thing in the world is the ability to create beauty. Those who have that ability, as you and I have, in a measure, should be, and by plain right are, exempted from the observance of the conventions that the Babbits are dedicated to. The creation of beauty is the highest possible form that man's endeavor can take. We should let no petty considerations of any kind interfere with our attempt to do so. I am not alone in this view; almost all of the great, for hundreds of years, have agreed that this is so."

Regardless of that, I don't believe it, I shan't accept the theory, and there is utterly no use in your presenting that fast and loose argument to me. I've started out to make something of myself—and if I do it, I'm going to do it on the 'American plan.'"

"Then, the whole fact of the matter is that you simply don't love me—isn't it?" Before this question Lolita sat silent. The whole fact of the matter was that she did love him, mightily, and it was all that she could do to hold to her determination to win out in the right way or not at all. Her heart was breaking at the thought that he could for one moment consider marrying Miss Pringle for her money.

"I do love you," she said at last in a tone hardly audible.

He rose and crossed to her chair, took both of her hands in his own, pulled her to her feet. Almost brutally he kissed her, and, brutal as the kiss was she gloried in it, for she felt somehow certain that he would never kiss Miss Pringle like that. For a moment she abandoned herself to his kisses and his lips searched her face, her throat, even her bosom.

"Oh, Mr. Warrill, you do love me," she said softly, "drop this mad idea of marrying Miss Pringle—you and I can manage somehow. I'll go without anything, everything. We can work our problem of life out together, and then, if we ever get anywhere, we will have done so by our own efforts cleanly. Please say you will."

"No," he said roughly: "I know what all that means, and I won't drag you through it; you're too beautiful to be marred by the ugly contacts with life that that might call for. Let me make it easy for both of us—please." Suddenly he picked her up bodily and started to carry her across the room.

For one moment delicious resignation took hold of her senses; it was wonderful to be picked up and carried off that way. He laid her down, and she could feel his hot breath upon her as he bent over her, and while every fiber of her being called out for surrender she yet fought back, sat up, pushed him away, stood erect, the tears rolling from her eyes as she saw the expression upon his face—one of such passion that it was horrible.

"Leave the room," she ordered.

He grasped her in his arms again, but with every ounce of strength in her body she fought him off and pushed him away, marveling that she was able to do it despite the fact that she loved him no less for what had nearly transpired.

"If you dare to touch me again," she told him earnestly, "I'll call for help." This sobered him, and he stepped back, his face flushed and angry.

"You haven't always been so particular," he reminded her.

"No," she agreed.

"If you loved me a little more—" he began.

"If I loved you a little less," she denied, "you would have had a better chance of succeeding. As it is, I want you to go, and I do not want you ever to come near me again until you have changed."

"And if I do not change?"

"Then I never want to see you again—ever."

"You mean that?"

"Absolutely."

"Lolita, you're superb."

She did not reply to this. Sitting upon the bed she covered her face with her hands and cried frankly and openly.

"You almost make me change my mind," he said sadly; "but I can't very well now, I can only hope that you will change yours. I think it's big of you to take this position, and all that; still, by and large, it's foolish—and because it is foolish, I think you'll get over it. I'm going now, but I'm coming back soon, and I want you to think things over and try and see them from my viewpoint." She did not reply; and, after a moment, he went to the door, passed through, and presently Lolita heard his feet descending the stairs—for the last time, she reflected. In an agony of torment she threw her slim body full length upon the bed and shook with sobs, realizing, now, that she didn't really want him to go, that, if it were possible to call him back she would accede to his wishes in everything, rather than lose him forever. Yet, as she lay there sobbing, little voices inside of her kept telling her approving, heartening things. At last she sat up dry eyed, thinking intently. For once and for all, under the most trying circumstances imaginable, she had proved to herself that she was able to withstand temptation. The easiest way had been most alluring from every standpoint, yet she had turned from it. A great truth seemed to dawn upon her as she sat there, still as a statue, staring at her reflection in the dresser glass: a misstep in life did not disqualify one but merely made it harder for one to fight and win the ultimate battle. Beyond a doubt, the battle just won was a most decisive one. Things would be different now.

She jumped up, and, though it was late, pulled a trunk out of the closet and opened it. Busily she flew about the room putting her things into it. She would leave the neighborhood, break away from everything and make her own way. When she had succeeded—if she succeeded, she would pay back Gray Eyes every cent that he had spent upon her.

Deep down inside of her, she knew, had been born a new strength of character, a new determination stronger, finer, firmer than ever before, and it was this knowledge that made her happy, even as the additional knowledge that she had not stopped loving Warrill and probably never would made her sad. Forcing thoughts of him from her mind she continued to pack. In the morning she would lose herself so that neither Warrill nor Gray Eyes could possibly find her, and, from that time on, fight her own battle.

In the morning Lolita rose still fully determined to carry out her resolution of the night before. It was a cold, raw, drizzly, typical Chicago day and not one likely to lift the spirits.

When she was dressed, Mrs. Hardy came in with the mail.

"Well, well, why so ambitious this morning?" asked that lady in her usual cheery manner.

"I'm going to leave you," returned Lolita, with sincere regret.

"Not really?"

"Yes, really. I want to get away from everyone, make my own way. I've let people help me out plenty long enough. If the man with the gray eyes wants to know where I've gone, don't tell him anything about me one way or another. Just say I will return what he has spent on me—as soon as I can, I'll take it out there to that roadhouse that he seems to have something to do with."

Mrs. Hardy looked genuinely sad.

"Well, I'm sure sorry to see you go, girlie; yet, I really believe that you're taking the right step. If you ever get into a jam, or there's anything I can possibly do for you, don't hesitate to call me up or drop me a line. Here's your mail—looks like another check—thin envelope." Lolita took the envelope, and Mrs. Hardy went out after repeating her promise to be of aid if needed.

Opening the envelope, Lolita found a check for $90 from a magazine, for another "confession" story she had written—the only story she had had out in the mails; she need not leave a forwarding address.

Lolita succeeded, with a generous

Why do GOODYEARS far outsell any other tires

---if any other tires are "better" or even as good

If you are told that some other tire "has a better tread than the Goodyear" . . . .

Stop and think, if it is actually true, why millions more people buy Goodyear Tires.

If you are told that some other tire "has a better carcass than the Goodyear" . . . .

Before you accept such a statement, stop and think why millions more people buy Goodyear Tires.

There is nothing in this world which compels car owners to choose Goodyear Tires.

If any other tire offered any advantages over a Goodyear, would not the public be buying that other make in largest numbers?

If any other tire equaled a Goodyear, would it not be as popular as Goodyear?

Instead, you find Goodyear producing MILLIONS MORE TIRES than any other company—outdistancing all competition by greatly increasing lengths each year. Stop and think WHY.

Most car owners have had years of experience with tires. They compare their experiences with those of their friends. Tire buyers are wise, very wise, today.

Enthusiastic "talk," strong "claims," advertising that promises everything—your experienced car owner is little impressed by such salesmanship.

The one thing, however, which continues to sell him is this fact, which checks with his personal experience and that of his friends: MILLIONS MORE PEOPLE RIDE ON GOODYEAR TIRES because billions of miles of motoring over roads everywhere continually prove Goodyear Tires to be the best.

Best—not by any small margin—but best by so marked a degree in life, traction, mileage and freedom from trouble that it means a great many dollars saved each year to always buy Goodyears!

There is very little difference in the cost of a Goodyear and the cheapest tire you can buy tip, in inducing a taxi driver to allow her trunks, of which she had two, to go into the taxi with her. This obviated the necessity of calling an expressman, which would have made it easier for anyone who wished to trace her.

"Drive to the Wilson avenue 'L' station," she directed him, "and get me a morning paper."

After he had made a stop for the paper she told him to drive south. While he did she hurriedly glanced through the paper. There was a classified ad, extolling the desirability of a room for rent near the park. . . . This somewhat interested her and she gave the chauffeur the address.

Presently they arrived before the number, which was just about a quarter of a block from Lincoln park, and Lolita alighted from the taxi, told the driver to wait, and approached a gray stone front house very dignified and pleasant looking though she could see that it was a rather old building. She rang the bell and presently a woman with a dust cap on came to the door.

"I'd like to see the room you have for rent," stated Lolita.

"Awri," replied the lady lazily and led her to a room on the second floor. It was a much smaller room than the one she had had at Mrs. Hardy's, but Lolita reflected that doubtless it was much cheaper and, beside, it had a bay window where she could put her typewriter upon a table and look into the park as she wrote.

"How much?" she inquired, without looking around any further.

"Ten bucks," replied the lady carelessly. Lolita thought this exorbitant, but nevertheless she took out a ten dollar bill and handed it to her. She had the taxi driver bring up her things, paid him off and set to unpacking, thankful that the lady had not recognized her. Nobody seemed ever to connect her with the Lolita Forbes of the newspaper article some months ago. She marveled a little that people should so quickly forget such things; and yet reflected that it was not unusual, so many things happened all the time in Chicago. She had given her correct name with some satisfaction; sailing under a specious flag was unpleasant, it always made her feel dishonest. She decided, however, still to write under the name of Margaret Farrar, since the commercial work she was doing might some day give way to really worth while work to which it would be a pleasure to sign her own name without having people connect it with the "confessions" and other superficial stories done merely for the money by "Margaret Farrar."

When she had her belongings straightened around to some extent she sat down to read the remainder of her morning paper. Turning a page she was made almost breathless by two pictures in the society column.

"Author Will Wed Heiress," the pictures were captioned. One picture was an extremely good likeness of Don Warrill, and the other was a photograph, which had evidently been greatly retouched, of Miss Pringle. The story below the pictures told of a wedding scheduled for June, with a prospective honeymoon in Europe to follow. There was also the usual sentimental blurb about its being a "love match—student falling in love with instructor," etc. It also described Miss Pringle as a young lady of undisputed talents since though she was wealthy she had made a journalist of herself by her own diligent efforts. Lolita wondered if Mr. Warrill could read that part of the article without laughing. She bit her lips to keep back the tears and got up and went to the window and stared off into the park. It was March. In three months Mr. Warrill would be married, would go away to Europe with Miss Pringle. Perhaps they'd talk of her . . . laugh over the little idiot who got herself into such an awful mess. She could almost hear Warrill's rich voice say:

"And there was a time when I thought I was in love with her—can you imagine that, dear?"

Probably Miss Pringle would be unable to imagine it, and would have no

backwardness about saying so—with embellishments. The hot tears rolled down her face as she stood by the window, and she realized that she loved Mr. Warrill just as much as ever—would always love him. Life was indeed cruel.

Determinedly she forced herself to stop thinking in that strain, put on her hat and coat and walked out to get some breakfast somewhere. After breakfast she boarded a car and went downtown, to the main library. An attendant pointed out the file card room and finding the right drawer she came to not less than a hundred and fifty or two hundred books bearing upon the subject of writing in its every possible phase. She selected three that she thought the most interesting and waited while an attendant got the volumes. She remembered the night that she had stayed after class to get Mr. Warrill to sign a library card guarantee for her, recalled how he had remarked that she looked more like a butterfly than a bookworm—would it ever be possible to forget his husky laugh, especially when one knew that some one else was hearing it? Presently the books came and she went out to take a car home.

As the car crawled along, stopping almost at every corner, she forced her mind to busy itself with something more substantial than husky laughs floating through her mind. She decided that she would have to work harder than she had ever worked before, since ninety dollars was now about all she had, and she wanted not only to make a living, but to save up enough to pay back Gray Eyes, and feel under no obligations to him.

To get her mind completely off of Mr. Warrill, she began to mentally plot out a serial. It would be a story about a girl who had actually taken a misstep and who could come back. So many stories of the sort were about pale, cringing little girls who skated along on the edge of wrongdoing, and finally were saved from it; it would be wonderful to get a serial printed that would encourage the many who had actually taken wrong steps and needed help and encouragement and the idea that it was not necessary to keep on going down afterward. Their problem was more acute, and more in need of solution than that of girls who merely "contemplated" wrongdoing. She remembered Harvey Torrence, and what he had represented to her. There had been a time when she honestly believed she loved him with all her heart and soul—and yet his passing had meant little to her. She saw now very clearly what really happened. She had been lonesome, terribly lonesome, alone in a big city. It had been easy then for Harvey to make love to her.

How much better one felt to see and understand the thing in that light, instead of thinking that a deliberate tendency toward badness had caused her false step. How much more people needed education than condemnation. If only more time could be spent in acquiring learning, instead of acquiring a specious knowledge of what persons should be condemned for, what their chances were for going to "hell" if they did this, that, and the other thing. . . . Lolita fairly glowed as she laid out scenes and continuity for a serial that should express this thought to girls who were condemning themselves as bad because of some misstep, set them to fighting back instead of slipping down just because they had done something wrong for which they were honestly sorry.

Suddenly some impulse caused her to look out of the car window, and there before her eyes stood the "bachelor's hotel," where Warrill lived. A terrific wave of depression took her. It seemed as though if she were to stay in the car another moment she would suffocate. She tried to request the motorman to stop at the next corner; but he slid the car by and it was not until the corner after that that he did stop, and she stepped down into the street and walked toward the curb.

She still had the sense almost of suffocation, and the dull, murky atmosphere did not help it any. She laughed a little bitterly to herself as she turned into the park, reflecting upon what a tremendous difference there was between the unquenchable feeling of love she now had for Warrill, and the weak, anemic little love feeling that she had had for Harvey Torrence, and which she had for a time mistaken for the real thing.

She had walked several blocks along the park paths when suddenly, with her head down, she almost ran into a man who blocked her way. She stopped and looked up, into the face of young Watterson. Completely at a loss she stammered:

"Why! I thought your father had sent you to Europe."

"He did," returned Watterson in a peculiarly dry tone, "but things have blown over and I came back. I'm awfully glad I met you. I've wanted to tell you how deeply I regret the terrible trouble I got you into." Somehow she sensed a change in him so profound that it was almost shocking. She gave voice to the thought.

"You've changed."

"Yes. I've changed. It was about time, wasn't it? Killing a man gives a fellow quite a turn. I can't get him out of my mind—and I couldn't get you out of my mind. I'm through with the sort of life that I used to live, on too much money. May I walk a little way with you?"

"Why, yes," said Lolita, a little uncertainly. He fell into step beside her. For about half a block they walked in silence and then he turned to her, and said:

"There is a whole lot that I want to say to you." His tone was so unmistakably earnest, and so different from his usual manner of speech that Lolita was profoundly moved.

A glorious morning, bracing air, life-giving sunshine—just the day for the children to drive with their mother into the country! And yet to get to the office on time, you are forced to take the car downtown—where it will be parked most of the day!

Wouldn't it prove a good investment in convenience, happiness and health to have two cars at your service? A smart car for city or social use and an economical roadster or phaeton for country driving have satisfactorily met the transportation needs of many families that have learned the financial ease of making their second car a good used one.

Right at this season particularly there are many attractive used cars—packed with unused mileage—offered at bargain prices in our stock.

SIXTY-FIVE ATTEND TUESDAY G. E. DEMONSTRATION

Sixty-five persons were in attendance Tuesday at the first General Electric refrigerator demonstration held at the Missouri Utilities office, between three o'clock and nine.

Officials of the office here succeeded in securing the service of Mrs. C. E. Rudy, Sikeston resident, owner of one of the machines, and home economics expert, to supervise the demonstration and prepare the menu of frozen fruit salad, vanilla custard cream and punch. Mrs. Rudy was assisted by Mrs. Jewell Scott Gentles

The ladies demonstrated the possibilities of the machine and Robert Hughes, who had been with G. E. for fourteen years, but who is now with Jones and Company, distributors of St. Louis, explained the technical points of the machine. Among other things, Mr. Hughes told his audience that it required the services of some 64 engineers working 14 years to perfect the present G. E. refrigerator which was placed on the market three years ago.

Howard E. Morrison has declared his intention of making a race for City Collector, if the government and the powers that be act favorably on the recommendations made Wednesday by the Republican County Committe with reference to the appointment of Ed Hollingsworth to the postmastership. Much fumididles has been going in the County Republican Camp of late that spells defeat to an office holder who will probably seek re-election the coming year. One of the defeated candidates, who was not on the certified roll of eligibles, wanted the job so bad he could almost taste it, has tried in divers and sundry ways to upset the eligible list, and the story goes, that a last minute appeal was made to the Republican County Committee to kick over the traces and refuse to endorse any of the eligibles and ask for the appointment of the one man who wanted it so bad.

A New Privilege On Good Rugs

The Mohawk Rug Mills (among the best in the country) have fitted us out with a rack of samples of small rugs from which we can fill orders in a very short time for any size or quality rug you may wish, including the finest of Wiltons in Imperial Karnak grade. Due to this arrangement S. E. Missouri rug buyers have a larger selection of patterns from which to choose than are shown in many city stores and you can see exactly what you are buying. In addition to this privilege we always carry a representative stock of staple sizes in Velvets and Axminsters ready for immediate delivery.

Are You From Missouri?

Go where you will. St. Louis, Cape, Cairo, or any other burg and look at bedroom suites from $125.00 to $200.00. Then examine the new arrivals at our store closely—construction as well as beauty of lines. If you'll do this and give us a fair shake we'll get the business. For further particulars drop in and see some of the prettiest numbers ever in Charleston at prices named.

Living Room Suites, Too

The above paragraph relating to bedroom suites applies also to the present stock of living room suites. Everyone of them is a new one right from the factory in recent shipments. The living room is the one in which you entertain company and therefore should receive first attention. "Putting the best foot forward" is a custom of the age to which most of us subscribe either consciously or unconsciously. Most families carry the practice into home furnishing and to those folks our pretty living room items will make a special appeal.

Everything In Refrigerators

From the General Electric on down to a low priced refrigerator we have on hand every size required for family use. Because of numerous trades on G-E's in which used refrigerators were taken as part pay the stock of good second hand ones is growing and special prices are being quoted to move them. You can find what you want here in refrigerators for less.

Special Range Terms to Farmers

The Monarch factory backs us in offering special terms on ranges to farmers whereby the payments may be made twice or three times a year until cancelled. Even yearly payments are available to those who require them. There's no better farm range made than a Monarch Malleable and we are here to back up every one sold without question or delay.

Bonus On Refrigerators And Oil Stoves

To "pep up" sales on refrigerators and oil stoves we have procured a lot of 32-piece dinner sets in pretty decorated semi-procelaine and also a number of colored granite cooking vessels in six-piece sets which will be given away with purchases of either oil stoves or refrigerators. On any refrigerator or oil stove sold for $25.00 or more choice of either of these pretty and useful sets may be had. The sets sell regularly for $6.00. See them in front window.

SAVE-A-LIFE WORK INTO THIRD WEEK

The beginning of the third week of the Save-a-Life period declared by the proclamation of Gov. Henry S Caulfield follows two weeks of great activity and of increased safety on the streets and highways of the State of Missouri. Statistics from the campaign will not be available until after July 1, but reports from cities and towns in the State indicate that accidents have been reduced and that the death toll is much smaller.

Automobile service shops and dealers from all over the State are reporting to the Motor Vehicle Commissioner of Missouri at Jefferson City that their shops are being crowded with motorists asking for free inspections. One St. Louis shop in two weeks inspected 240 automobiles. Another inspected 180 automobiles. A Kansas City shop inspected 140 automobiles in the two weeks. It is hoped that this rate of inspection will be maintained all over the State. If it is it would mean that not less than 450,000 of the State's 675,000 motor cars will have been inspected at the close of the Save-a-Life period, July 1.

In the inspection stations much attention is given to brakes as being the most dangerous of all of the mechanical parts of an automobile. To be safe cars equipped with two-wheel brakes should be able to stop in nine feet going ten miles an hour, 37 feet at 20 miles an hour and 83 feet at 30 miles an hour. Equipped with four-wheel brakes, a car should be stopped in 6 feet going at 10 miles an hour, 24 feet at 20 miles an hour and 55 feet at thirty miles an hour. It will be the purpose of inspectors to see that the cars do stop in those instances in order to be perfectly safe on the highways.

Several Chambers of Commerce in Missouri towns have floated banners across the street from their offices, asking citizens to have the cars inspected. Chiefs of Police in many of the towns have instructed their police officers to suggest inspections to motorists whose cars do not bear the red inspection sticker. The Chief of Police of St. Louis has agreed the last ten days of the campaign to have his officers distribute notification cards to all motorists whose cars do not bear the inspection sticker. This will probably also be done in Kansas City and some of the larger cities of the State

Proclamations similar to those issued by Gov. Caulfield have been issued by mayors of a number of cities including the mayors of Boonville, Higginsville, Glendale, Maplewood, Ferguson, Jefferson City, University City, Warrensburg and Orrick.

It has been the purpose of the Secretary of State of Missouri to appoint free inspection stations in every town and city in Missouri. This would mean that practically every dealer in automobiles and most of the independent repair shops have had this official appointment and inspections can therefore, be made at any service shop in the State.

The Proof of the flour is in the Baking

There is more to the goodness of Juanita Flour than its purity, wholesomeness and velvety texture. There is the exclusive process of milling that produces such effective results for the housewife in her baking ventures.

Be critical in your choice of flour. Insist upon Juanita Flour and you have achieved the utmost of nourishing factors, the acme of baking co-operation and the fullest measure of economy.

J. W. Bowlre, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of the Frisco Lines and Otis Embry, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen of the Frisco Lines, each recently wrote to Gov. Caulfield asking that in radio talks and addresses made in behalf of the Save-a-Life period that citizens of Missouri be cautioned about the danger at railroad crossings. Governor Caulfield has referred this communication to the campiagn director, Major Robert E. Lee of St. Louis, for action.

The campaign is proving so successful that there is some talk among the service stations of extending it fifteen days or until July 15. Announcemsnt of this extension, if made, will be made later.

NEW MADRID COUNTY FARM BUREAU NEWS

Melon growers can make a better crop by the use of a few simple practices according to County Agent Julian. If fertilizer is available, side dress the melon hills, put a single handful of fertilizer around each hill, scatered in a circle not getting further out from the hill than two feet and not dropping it on the plants as it will burn them. Take a little dirt over the fertilizer to prevent washing and to help dissolve.

The melons should be thinned to one plant to the hill, cultivation should continue as long as the vines can be handled after which two rows of peas may be drilled down each middle. Pruning is very essential prune off all melons except two or three of the best ones as soon as they are the size of a quart cup, keep on pruning. Each time that a load is cut, prune off all dinks, goose necks, and rotten ended ones.

If anthracnose shows up and causes the leaves to start firing, get bordeaux mixture powder and put one pound in six gallons of water and spray thoroughly to stop it. And by all means get a stacker who knows how to stack when loading a car.

Regular cultivation is absolutely necessary during dry weather says County Agent Julian.

Even though the field is clean and cultivation does nothing apparently but raise a dust, it is essential that it be continued, because it is more necessary in dry weather that moisture be conserved. Regular cultivation keeps a mulch and prevents the soil from packing which in turn holds the moisture that comes to the surface through capillary action. Any farmer knows from experience that moisture collects under boards, papers or any covering, and if he stops to think, he will realize that it will collect in the same manner under a dust mulch. If the mulch is there, the moisture will not escape, when the ground is packed and no mulch the moisture comes to the top of the ground and evaporates rapidly which results in a continual and steady loss of moisture that is going on at all times. Keep up the cultivation and save the moisture.

OIL CAN AIDS HITCH HIKER IN CROSS COUNTRY TRIP

Here's a new idea for hitch hiking, or getting a ride along the highway and it is such a clever one that most anyone would succumb to it. Recently a resident of this city while driving home from a city near here, saw a young man trudging along the highway with a new five-gallon can. "Here's a chap out of gasoline and I will give him a lift" thought the Carrollton man and setting the idea to action, he stopped and took the walker in.

"Run out of gasoline?" he queried. "No", the boy replied. "It's just an idea that's working out fine. A few days ago I left home in Ohio for Kansas, where I expect to spend the summer. I was carrying my clothes in a grip and I walked all day without a solitary lift. I went to a hardware store, bought this gasoline can took a can opener and carefully slit the top all around the edge with the exception of a few inches which would act as a hinge. I then put my clothes in the can and discarded the handbag. With this outfit I started down the highway until a man picked me up He thought just like you, that I was out of gasoline, but when I told him my ruse, he jst laghed and took many miles off".

The Carrollton man laghed, too and thought the joke good enough to buy the boy a meal when he reached Carrollton, and sent him on his way rejoicing—with his gasoline can which is not a can at all, but a camouflaged valise and a come-one, all in one.

No doubt the next time he hears of this Knight of the Road, he will be will be president of a bank—or robbing one—or maybe both.—Carrollton Democrat.

CAPE-BLUFF ROUTE PLANNED BY BOARD

Poplar Bluff, June 18.—The Missouri Highway Commission has decided upon the route of the Poplar Bluff-Cape Girardeau Highway, according to information received here today. The route has been discussed and the construction urged by not only the two largest cities of Southeast Missouri, but by intermediate towns, for more than five years.

It is proposed that the route shall leave Cape Girardeau over Highway 74 to Dutchtown, thence over Highway 25 to Advance, from where a farm to market road will be run to Kinder, in Stoddard County. This will connect with the constructed section of Highway 51 to Puxico.

From Puxico the route will run almost directly to Fisk, where it will intersect Highway 60, and then to Poplar Bluff.

It was planned to have this road extend from Puxico straight into Poplar Bluff, but this would run it through a low section and construction cost would be too great, the highway department has held. It also would necessitate construction of another bridge over the St. Francis River. The department is to construct a $225,000 bridge at Fisk, which will serve both routes.

Since adjournment of the legislative session, the department has been busy compiling a new edition of the Game and Fish Laws of Missouri. That the public generally, and especially the sportsmen are interested in strict observance of the Game and Fish Laws is evidenced by the numerous requests sent in for copies of the 1929 number. This edition will be ready for distribution some time during July, when copies will be issued to all inquiries.

HERCULANEUM WANTS REVENGE HERE SUN.

Puffed up with ten victories out of eleven starts this season, and smarting under the one single defeat administered last Sunday by Flat River the Herculaneum team will visit Sikeston this Sunday afternoon to try a avenge the defeat handed them last year by the locals. The game will be called at 2:45 o'clock.

The Thomas-DeRousse battery of the visitors is known to Sikeston players and fans as a dangerous combination, both being veterans in their places. Thomas was offered a large sum to pitch one game here last summer for the locals, but could not break his contract with Herculaneum. The visitors will place Horn in right field, McCoy at second, Defoni in the hot corner, Rapp at short, Masterson at first and Yesberg, Partney, at left and center field. Baker, Francis and Broombaugh form the reserve.

There is a possibility of ringing in a "dark horse" hurler for the locals, according to Tom Malone; but so long as Homer Burrus is able to deliver like he did last Sunday against Cambria, he will be used.

Thomas may catch for the locals Sunday in event that Byron Bowman is out of town. The rest of the lineup remains unchanged.

The Memphis U. S. Engineers will visit Sikeston Sunday, June 30.

TALLEY UNDER $10,000 BOND, TRIAL JULY 3

Poplar Bluff, June 19.—Levy Talley of Sikeston, held in connection with the robbery Saturday night of the postoffice at Hunterville, was ordered held under $10,000 bond today when arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Freer. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for July 3.

Two other men who took part in the holdup have not been arrested but postal inspectors expect to locate them within a few days, it was said here today.

Three men entered the M. P. Estes store at Hunterville Saturday night and took about $400, a part of which was postal receipts. Estes is also posptmaster, the postoffice being located in the store building.

MAN KILLED ON WAY TO CEMETERY

East Prairie, June 18.—Alex Lewis, 33 years old, was killed at 9:30 o'clock this morning, when a truck he was driving at a fast rate turned over two miles north of here on Highway 55 and threw him on the concrete breaking his neck. According to Harold Handler, who was a short distance behind Lewis, the front wheel got off the concrete half of the highway and skidded on the graveled half.

Lewis, who was working for a local undertaking company, was on his way to the Oak Grove Cemetery with a coffin case. It is said that this was the fifth serious accident to happen in the past few months on the stretch where Lewis was killde.

Surviving him are his wife and mother, who reside in this place; a brother, Charles Lewis, lives at Sikeston, and another brother, Steve Lewis, lives at East Prairie.

He was a World War Veteran. Funeral arrangements have not been made yet.

Cape Lineman Dies Of Burns

WARNS INVESTORS IN FUR FARMING

An effort will soon be made in this city, we are informed, to sell units of stock in a proposed Muskrat Farm near Cape Girardeau. Announcement of the fact that such a project was contemplated, came through the Southeast Missourian, daily paper of Cape Girardeau in which announcement, the promoters assured prospects of returns amounting to 1200 per cent and more. Not one item of editorial comment, and no mention in the news colum of that paper has been noted to date regarding the reliability of its promoters, the organization and backing of the co poration, or the legality of the proposed scheme.

Last week this office was visited by P. A. McAllister, stock salesman who outlined the plan, and assured this office that when the time cam advertising space would be purchased to "sell" Sikeston investors on this scheme. The gentleman called the office again this week, and objected strenuously to a small item carried in the Man About Town column which made light of the proposed get-rich-quick scheme. Mr. McAllister cautioned this office to be careful of its statements and to "investigate the money making possibilities of fur farming before broadcasting harmful statements".

In accordance with this request, and with the best interests of prospective Standard investors in mind, this paper did wire for full information on fur farming, and more especially for information as to the reliability, and business standing of the Ozark Fur Farms, Inc., of which Mr. McAllister is a member.

We present the findings with no malice toward Mr. McAllister, as stated in a letter of June 19 from the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis as follows:

"I have your inquiry regarding the Ozark Fur Sales, Inc., Ambassador Building, St. Louis, in connection with which a P. A. McAllister is soliciting stock sales or sales of units including a pair of muskrats and stock for $300 in the city of Cape Girardeau.

I note what you state about his intentions of visiting Sikeston later

You are advised that our efforts to secure any information along the lines of the experience of the men operating the Ozark Fur Traders, Inc. 1212 Ambassador Bldg., have met with no success. A visit to their office resulted in their stating they were not yet ready to issue any information. That was followed by a letter asking certain specific questions which has not been answered. That letter was dated May 8, 1929. They were at that time trying to sell their stock in St. Louis.

Certain of the individuals connected with this organization are known to be stock salesman—I do not mean stock bearing fur. None of the men are known to have had any experience whatever in raw fur growing and if they have connected with anyone with experience in this line, we have not learned of it.

All of the incorporators are residents of St. Louis Hotels, and according to the records of the Secretary of State, are as follows: G. M. Noonan, Gatesworth Hotel; P. A McAllister Robert E. Lee Hotel and J. Kent, Roberts E. Lee Hotel. The Robert E Lee Hotel is located in the downtown section of St. Louis.

The firm was incorporated as Ozark Fur Traders, Inc., April 6th 1929, State of Missouri, but at that time had no permit or had it made application to sell securities in this State. I am at this time checking again with the Finance Commissioner to ascertain whether or not stcok sales privileges have been secured and you will be advised further when I receive a reply.

I wish to call your attention to United States Government booklet issued as leaflet No. 27, by the Department of Agriculture, which you can get without charge from your Congressman. Particularly you should read the first page, which, among other statements, contains the following:

Large returns are easily predicted or promised to prospective investors on an abnormally high rate of dividends or on large pelt profits. Heavy risks usually accompany such lures. Too often they are the chief talking points of financial charlatans. Promoters know that the names and endorsements successful men carry weight, and often use these without authorization.

The promoter who tries to impress the prospective investor by tabulating the fabulous returns supposed to have been realized in the early stages of fur farming from investment in a pair of foxes unwittingly admits that his offering cannot stand on its own feet. Such figures fire the imagination, but they are generally deceptive. They are not a true index to the profits to be expected from any new enterprise into which the small investor is urged to put his money.

You should, of course, read the entire booklet described, which is entitled "Recommendations to Beginners in Fur Farmin". Any Congressman will be glad to have you provide with a copy without cost, on request.

Should anything further develop in connection with this particular organization, you will be furnished with a copy of our report.

Sincerely,

W. C. ROSENBAUM,
Special Representative.

P. S: Since dictating the above, have telegram from Securities Commissioner Stockard at Jefferson City, of June 19, 1929, stating company has no permit to sell its units or shares under the Blue Sky Laws of Missouri.

SOLDIERS LOSE TO OIL MEN 9 TO 4

One error, a wild pitch, in the fourth inning is credited by the losing Co. K team for the 9 to 4 score rolled up by the Oil Men last Monday evening. Up to the fourth frame, the soldier team led four to one, and everything seemed rosy. The Oil men batted around in the fourth however, and scored six runs after two men had been downed, and before the last out, retired the side. Seven runs came in during the batting spree, which added to one in the first, and one in the fifth totaled nine tallies to four for the soldiers.

The Company K boys found Wilmuth, hurler for the Oil Men in the first for two hits and one run, Dudley scoring the lone talley. Neil scored in the second on Kirby's sacrifice hit, and Dudley and Weekley crossed the plate in the third for the last two scores.

Kindred started the fireworks for the John D team by rapping Neil for a triple in the first inning. He scored on a single by Homer Burrus. The Oilers fell victims to easy putouts in the next two innings, but came back strong in the fourth, when seven scores crossed the home plate.

Batteries for Co. K, Neil and Sutton; for the Oil Men, Wilmuth and Mocabe.

TRAIN JUMPS TRACK DELAYED 4 HOURS

The fast Sunnyland, pride of the St. Louis division of the Frisco Lines, was delayed about four hours Tuesday evening, when Engineer Curtis failed to observe an open switch north of the station and the engine and two trucks on the tender jumped off the track. A wrecking crew from the Chaffee shops were called immediately after the accident, which occurred at 6:00 o'clock, and arrived here after nine o'clock. Forty-five minutes work resulted in getting the locomotive back on the rails, and the belated Sunnyland and a group of tired passengers finally departed for Memphis and points south around 10:30.

Tom Malone, passenger agent here explained Wednesday, that at an interlocking switch such as the one used by the Missouri Pacific and Frisco, the blocks are always set against incoming trains. It has been customary, however, to have the line clear for the Sunnyland from 15 minutes to half an hour before train time, and the trains instead of coming to a full stop, and whistling for a clear board, have been accustomed to slowing down and rolling into the station The tower man was busy Tuesday evening, and failed to clear the line at the usual time, and engineer Curtis alone is to blame for not observing the signal.

The fireman on this train, however, noticed the block, and called to Curtis as the latter pulled the whistle cord for clearance. The engineer applied brakes as soon as he realized the trouble, and succeeded in keeping all coaches on the track. Passengers claimed that they felt two distinct shocks, one when the engine left the rails, and one when the train was suddenly halted when brakes were applied.

Curtis drove the train on to Memphis, despite the predictions of hundreds of Sikeston spectators, who declared that he would be relieved of his job immediately.

EXAMPLE SET BY MOTHERS IS RULED MORE VALUABLE THAN GAINING REVENGE

The peace, dignity and good will of residents living at the corner of North Street and North Handy is again restored, this time by order of the Court.

Several days ago charges were filed by Mrs. Rose Orbison, charging that Mrs. Helton, a neighbor, struck the nine-year-old Orbison child, and counter charges of disturbing the peace were at once entered by Mrs. Helton against Mrs. Orbison. The affair was aired before Judge Myers Tuesday afternoon, who handled the situation so that good will instead of constant friction and ill will might be maintained in that neighborhood.

Both women were fined $10 and costs, and in each case the fine and costs were stayed on condition that each make an effort to live peacably with the other. The court pointed out that both women had children dependent upon them for physical support, instruction and guidance in social living and that the example set by the respective mothers would have great influence upon the children involved.

'COUSIN ED' NAMED FOR POSTMASTER

Following several months of examinations, political log rolling County Committee meetings, and handshaking Cousin Ed Hollingsworth was named last Wednesday evening by the Republican County Committee in session at Benton as the successful candidate for the postmastership of Sikeston. The defeated candidates were Howard Morrison and Frank E. Mount. Fifteen of the sixteen county committeemen were present at the meeting Wednesday night and concurred in the recommendation.

Immediately after the announcement, Ed Turminstein, County Republican chairman, handed Mr. Hollingsworth a telegram to Congressman Dewey Short, stating the recommendation of the County Committee Congressman Short will now instruct the Postmaster General at Washington, who will in turn, carry the recommendation as a matter of routine to President Herbert Hoover, who will later receive the confirmation of the appointment from the Senate.

If the recommendation is favorably received by Congressman Short, Mr. Hollingsworth will take office immediately.

The defeated candidate, Howard Morrison, will declare himself a candidate for the unexpired term of City Collector now held by Hollingsworth A special election will decide this matter if the new postmaster takes his post within two months; after that time, the City Council may appoint a collector.

Mrs. Katie Cook, librarian, stated Wednesday that children were the most frequent users of the library here. Between 25 and 35 visit the rooms regularly to exchange books.

The committee of the Woman's Club has recently ordered a shipment of new fiction for adults, including the popular "Henry VIII", and a large assortment of children's books, which will be available within a few weeks.

S. E. MO. TOURNEY TO BE HELD JUNE 30

Plans for the annual golf championship match of Southeast Missouri have been perfected. The first 18-hole match will be played at Poplar Bluff June 30, and the second at Cape Girardeau July 4. This championship match has no effect on the round robin tourney now going on, and will be participated in by clubs from the following towns, Poplar Bluff, Sikeston, Cape Girardeau, Charleston and Farmington.

A qualifying match of all players of the five towns of Southeast Missouri will be held previous to the tournament and the 12 men from each town that have the lowest scores will participate in the tournament at Poplar Bluff and Cape Girardeau.

The 12 players will be divided in three classes according to their scores. The first four players with the lowest score will be placed in the championship class, the next four in Class A and the last four in Class B.

NO TURNOUT FOR WEST ROUTE MEETING TUESDAY

G. B. Greer, chairman of the West route committee, waited in vain for interested parties to show up at the meeting scheduled to be held Tuesday afternoon at the City Hall. He explained the lack of interest in terms of farm work, saying that those who might be expected to take part in securing the right-of-way were now engaged in harvesting wheat.

Mr. Greer stated later that he would select a small committee, probably four or five, and personally oversee getting the right-of-way to Kluge's Hill signed up.

Mrs. Blanton was operated on at tne Emergency Hospital Wednesday morning and Thursday morning was bright as a new dollar. In the course of a week she will be able to go home where it is expected a rapid recovery will be made. It has been mighty trying on the family to have their main dependence down and out for weeks and they could do nothing. But thank the Lord and the skill of Dr. Kendig, she is on the road to take her place again at the head of the table.

After the harvest this fall business in every branch should be good. Of course, after interest and taxes have been paid, there will not be so much money left, but there is not a house, barn or outbuilding in this trade territory that does not need to be repaired and painted. Furniture, bedding and wearing apparel in country and town alike needs replenishing. The mules, the farm implements and fences are played out and must be replaced. With all these things so badly needed, those who owe past due bills to the merchant, should not forget that he has been badly cramped for lack of money to carry on, and should pay him part of what they owe. The cloth has got to be cut pretty close to cover all the needs and save the credit. May the season continue good and the harvests be the best in many years.

The Standard management wishes to express its appreciation for consideration given our solicitors who have been calling on its readers the past week collecting back subscriptions and soliciting new ones. The results have been very satisfactory considering the scarcity of money. Instructions were given these solicitors to be considerate and use no strong-arm tactics in their attempts to collect, but to call again after wheat harvest that may suit some better.

SPEED OF BUSSES HELD AT 40 M. P. R.

A speed limit of forty miles an hour is being enforced on all passenger motorbusses in Missouri, the public service commission announced.

"The commission is determined that a speed of forty mles an hour shall be the limit", the commission said. "All motor busses must come to a stop before crossing a railroad track. Rules of the road must be maintained and all motor bus equipment must be kept in good mechanical condition".

Every effort is being made to eliminate the "outlaw" or wildcat bus operator, the commission said.

"The Commission appointed a motor bus inspector in January, and the records of the Public Service Commission show that the number of accidents by busses on the highways outside the cities has been reduced to almost the vanishing point. Accidents that have occurred during the present year were not of a serious character and were in some instances cause by the carelessness of the private automobile operator. There have been no deaths by motor bus accidents in Missouri since the motor bus inspector was appointed and fewer complaints are received by the commission relative to infraction of the rules of the commission and the law of the State than were formerly received.

"If the bus is delayed enroute, or is unable to start on schedule time, the commission has instructed all motor carriers that under no condition should an attempt be made to make up lost time. The Public Service Commission desires to warn the traveling public to beware of the out-law or wild-cat motor carrier. All persons who desire to secure passage by bus should examine the outside of the bus to ascertain if the letters 'P. S. C. Mo.', together with the number, are painted on the side. Such painting indicates that the operator of that particular bus has deposited with the Public Service Commission a liability insurance policy covering all accidents that may happen to the bus or its passengers. There is no assurance that such protetcion is afforded by busses engaged in intra-State traffic that do not have such marking."

CHIEF COUNSEL FOR MISSOURI HIGHWAY COMMISSION RESIGNS

Jefferson City, June 18.—Edgar Shook, chief counsel for the Missouri Highway Commission, today resigned effective July 15, to become associated with a Kansas City law firm. In his new position Shook will be in charge of legal work in connection with the acquisition of the site for the proposed lake and hydroelectric power dam on the Osage River near Bagnell.

Shook has been chief counsel for the commission since February 1 1928, succeeding Lue Lozier of Carrollton. Prior to that time he was chief assistant to Lozier for two years. He is a graduate of the law school of the University of Missouri a World War veteran and practiced law in Marshall, Mo., before his connection with the highway department.

The highway commission is meeting here today, but has not selected a successor to Shook.

MISSISSIPPI COUNTY FARM BUREAU NEWS

Missouri is authorized to send 34 outstanding 4-H Club delegates to the Mid-South Fair to be held at Memphis, Tenn., September 28 to October 5, according to T. T. Martin, State Club Agent. This authorization comes from Frank D. Fuller, secretary-manager of the Fair.

Of these delegates, 16 will be selected from the State at large and 18 will be chosen from Southeastern Missouri Counties as follows: Two each from Butler, Dunklin, Pemiscot, Cape Girardeau, Jackson, Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi and Stoddard.

The delegates chosen will be housed and cared for free of cost during their stay in Memphis, and will have an opportunity to take part in all Club camp activities, tours and contests of the 4-H Club Department.

The selection of the two club members to represent Mississippi County at the Mid-South Fair will be made the first of September. The method of making this selection will be announced later, according to the County Agent.

Although the poultry flock owner who pays close attention to the production of eggs during the year, will have occasion to cull his flocks almost every month, the real culling season actually begins the later part of June and continues through October, according to the County Agent.

To the inexperienced flock owner, the mid and late summer season is a time in which it is not difficult to distinguish between poor lawers or loafers and good layers by means of external body characteristics. This applies to chickens which are reasonably well fed on both grain and mash containing proper amounts of protein, and does not apply to chickens which are allowed to range for their food and pick up what they can.

In the latter case, it is difficult for even the experienced poultrymen to determine accurately the ability of the average hen to produce eggs during the summer months.

Although there are always exceptions to the rule, in general, it has been found that the hen which lays consistently throughout the summer until early fall, molts late in the season and grows a new set of feathers rapidly at molting time, is the most productive type of hens to keep on the farm. The early molter is usually a bird which lays very rarely in winter time and will not produce consistently during the hot weather months.

Birds which are inclined to go broody at frequent intervals, should also be discriminated against, because every broody spell means a loss of egg production for a period of 7 to 14 days.

Culling demonstrations will be held at different points in Mississippi County by County Agent Teal thruout the summer months for the purpose of instructing folks in the practice of distinguishing between good and poor lyaers. Folks desiring to have their flocks culled may secure the services of the County Agent free of charge if they will advertise the affair as a demonstration and invite neighbors to attend for purposes of instruction.

The first demonstration on culling and to dip chickens for the purpose of destroying lice was held at the farm of S. A. Presson, Wednesday morning.

From the 70,000,000 pounds of free nitrogen in the air, over every acre of land, an average acre of inocuated legumes will take from 5 to 125 lbs of nitrogen annually and will store it in the plants and roots where it will be available for use, according to Ide P. Trotter, Crops Extension Specialist, Missouri College of Agriculture

Every day evidence before the eyes of Mississippi County farmers should convince them of this point. Small quantities of manure in wheat or corn fields, the presence of heavy dark green clumps of wheat in fields used for watermelon production the previous year, or the noticeable growth of a crop following the plowing under of green material are concrete evidences available this year to prove need for more nitrogenous organic matter.

The nitrogen element in any mixed fertilizer is the most expensive type of fertilizer to buy. If, by growing legume crops, the purchase of nitrogen, sacked in burlap bags can be avoided, a district saving can be affected and consequently a greater profit can be realized.

For Mississippi County, the crops which are able to take nitrogen from the air if the roots of said crops are inoculated, are alfalfa, sweet clover soybeans, cowpeas, red clover, alsike clover, lespedeza and vetch. There are other legumes, but those mentioned above are commonly known and frequently found in the agricultural systems of Missouri farmers.

In the process of growing soybeans, or cowpeas in wheat in Mississippi County this year, it would be desirable, thinks the County Agent, for farmers to consider seriously the plowing under in the green stage, of at least a portion of the crop for soil improvement purposes. This suggestino is made with the full understanding that the need of harvesting for seed is imperative in some cases, and cutting for hay is also essential where no other hay crop is available.

Does the Shoe Fit?

"I once knew a farmer", said the fence corner philosopher, "who didn't believe in co-operation or organization.

"He took his stuff to market, tho', over a road that was built through the combined efforts of his neighbors his county, State and nation.

"He sent his children to a school made possible through co-operation.

"He occasionally went to a church built and supported by an organization.

"He purchased union-made overalls, and had his whiskers trimmed in a union barber shop and his machinery was made by union labor.

"When he sold his crops, the men who purchased them took out a percentage to pay their dues to their various trade associations.

His wife took her butter and eggs to a town where the grocers' association all paid the same price and the chewing tobacco she brought back home to him all carried union label and was grown by co-operatives.

The minister who preached the funeral sermon belonged to the Ministerial Association.

"His casket was made by union labor and he was buried through the co-oeration of his neighbors.

"Yet this man never believed in co-operation among farmers, or the possibility of benefits to be derived from organized groups of the class to which he belonged".

SEVEN DROWN WHEN PLANE FALLS IN SEA

Folkstone, England, June 17.—Seven passengers of the Giant Imperial Airways liner City of Ottawa plunged to their deaths in the English Channel three miles off Dungeness today. Only partial identification had been made tonight and it was feared that one American was among them. Another American, Homer W Tatham, escaped, and told a graphic story of the plunge of the huge aircraft.

There were 13 aboard the ship including Pilot Captain Brailli and Mechanic W. S. Barnett. They had left Croydon for Paris this morning.

A short way from shore the plane was seen to waver and turn back and then strike the water. The pilot had exerted every resource to bring his plane as near as possible to a Belgian trawler, the crew of which was able to rescue four passengers, the pilot and mechanic.

HOT SPRINGS MAN FOUND DEAD IN SLOUGH NEAR BLUFF

Poplar Bluff, June 18.—Mystery surrounds the death of C. H. Danphine, 65, of Hot Springs, Ark., whose lifeless body was found in a slough on the branch of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, two miles east of here this morning.

Identification of the body was made by Coroner Grover Greer through letters found on his person. He had been visiting a sister, Mrs. Edith Harbour, at Springfield, Ill., and was making his way back to the home of his daughter at Hot Springs.

Examination of the body revealed that the body had been dead about four hours. The only mark on the body was a broken jawbone. The man did not drown, the coroner said, but was dead when he fell or was thrown into the marsh.

Coroner Greer is of the opinion the man either fell from a freight train or he was killed by hoboes and thrown out of a freight car of a passing train. The latter theory seems to be more plausible, Greer intimated.

Plans for an inquest are waiting arrival of two daughters at Hot Springs, Ark. They are Mrs. Adeline Gasbane and Mrs. Lena Gasberry.

WRECK IS TAKEN TO ST. LOUIS TUESDAY

The badly burned Hupmobile "8" which passed through Sikeston Tuesday, formerly belonged to Miss Lula Sparks. The fine auto was kept on the Sparks farm until about three weeks ago, when a small barn used as a combination garage and feed storage place caught fire and burned. Cause of the fire is not known. The remains of the Hup were taken to St. Louis by a wrecker from that city.

Cape Girardeau, June 18.—Charges of assault with intent to kill will be filed against Earl Peavy and James T. Munson and his wife. Held following the shooting of Officer Robert Wilson early Sunday. EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS FROM COMMERCIAL APPEAL

A touch of color at the White House will not make the whole nation kin.

The steam roller of the House of Representatives surelly put the bent in debentures.

We suppose that Mary Booze is now awaiting her invitation to the next White House function.

And they said Mrs. Alfred Smith was unfit socially to preside over functions at the executive mansion.

It might be advisable to drop the "white" from the White House now that the de Priest tea party has added another tint.

After eating some of the Chinese dishes that are served as delicacies one can hardly blame the natives of that land for turning cannibal.

President Hoover, after being the beneficiary of an issue that broke the solid south, is in a fair way to restore and to increase that solidity.

A headline reads: "Hoover's Week-End Is Spoiled by Rain". It's not that bad. It will dry out, as many others who have had fisherman's luck can attest.

Despite his claim that the Hoover administration has not fulfilled its promises to the farmers, who doubts that Senator Borah, if there were an election tomorrow, would be the most zealous supporter of that administration?

The apologists for the exhibition of of social equality in the White House aggravate rather than palliate the offense when they say Mrs. Hoover had no choice but to invite to tea the wife of the Chicago negro vice overlord and now Congressman Oscar de Priest.

This paragraph is not political Ever since the establishment of independence of the United States, it has been the practice of the occupants of the White House to, at some time hold Congressional receptions to which Congressmen and their wives were received at the White House The Hoovers were but following this custom and when the wife of the colored member presented herself, there was nothing else to do but receive her. There have been colored members of Congress before, but this is the first instance that is recalled when any of them responded to the invitation. It is the belief of The Standard editor that the Hoovers are just as far from believing in social equality of the races as any fire-eating Southerner, but they are not private individuals and are servants of the people and in line with past precedents, were imposed upon by the De Priests. Many caustic paragraphs will be shot at the Hoovers over this incident and we have an idea may encourage the attempt of other social equality stunts as the De Priest entertainment tonight in Washington to which all Republican members but two were invited.

If a person be innocent of crime, why should he run when an officer starts to arrest him, or pick him up for investigation. Innocent people do not fear investigations but law violators know they are guilty and fear the proof is at hand, hence, take to their heels.

It will be all right here, if Mr. Hoover will order the equal rights bill enforced in those Southern States that voted for him last fall. All he will have to do is to give instructions to U. S. Marshals to see that negroes are admitted to all hotels, restaurants, churches and theatres—then watch the undertakers get busy with negro funerals.

We suppose our Mr. Dewey Short, white, will be among the social lions who will attend the function given by Oscar De Priest, black, at the auditorium in Washington, D. C.. tonight. Birds of a feather will flock together.

It might be well to suggest that the next mixed reception held at the White House during the hot summer time, that the decoration consist of dog fennel and "jimson" weeds as they have an aroma that might offset the smell from some of the guests present.

By wrapping your winter things in newspapers, we cannot guarantee against theft by robbers, but practical assurance that garments will not be visited by moths can be given. Moths hate printer's ink for some reason or other.

Crooks, robbers, bandits and moths fear newspapers. The former dislike publicity ,and the latter printers' ink. Thus again is the power of the press vindicated.

To make life interesting it becomes almost necessary to find interest in the uninteresting, vital facts in the non-essential, and good in all men, for the greater part of our lives must necessarily be spent, it seems, among those who we first consider uninteresting, and non-essential—to our well being and happiness.

DENIES BIRDS POINT FLOODWAY EVER O. K'D

Expressing the view that final approval of the Bird Point floodway in Southeast Missouri had never been given by President Coolidge, which is directly contrary to the generally accepted view, W. H. Dick, president of the Mississippi River Flood Control Association, with headquarters in Memphis, has asked lower valley representatives in Congress to raise this point while the legal status of the project is being studied by the attorney general of the United States.

The project, which would throw some 150,000 acres of rich farm lands into a flowage basin during emergencies, involving the construction of a large amount of levees, is halted pending solution of legal questions raised by property owners in the area. President Hoover recently asked Attorney General William D. Mitchell for advice on legal questions involved in the valley's flood problems and the Bird Point matter is expected to be brought in although it previously had been conceded that President Coolidge had approved it in full.

"I do not agree that the President has ever accepted the engineering report on the floodway", Mr. Dick has advised several congressmen active in flood control legislation.

"The act of Congress for the control of floods on the Mississippi River gave the engineering board the power only to consider the engineering differences between the adopted or Jadwin project and the plans recommended by the Mississippi River Commission and 'to recommend to the President such action as it may deem necessary in respect to such engineering differences and the decision of the President upon all recommendations or questions submitted to him by such board shall be followed in carrying out the project herein adopted. The board shall not have any power or authority in respect to such project except as herein provided'.

"It is clear that the cost of flowage rights or the cost of land on which to construct engineering works has nothing whatever to do with the engineering plans and is purely a matter of economics.

"Therefore, when the President gave a qualified approval to the engineering recommendations in relation to the Bird Point spillway it was evidently his purpose to give that approval provided the flowage rights and the lands for levee right-of-way could be secured at a price which he would afterward fix, and if these lands could not be secured at these prices suggested by him, then it seems clear that his approval of the project is withheld.

"If, on the other hand, as it seems clear, the President had no authority to suggest the basis for arriving at values of flowage rights and of land in fee simple, the procedure for arriving at these values being fixed in the law, it may be said that his ruling as to flowage rights and land values made December 11, 1928, is void and the determination of these values is left as is provided elsewhere in the law".—Commercial Appeal.

INTERNATIONAL LIONS ELECT RAY LE GRAND RILEY PRES

Louisville, June 15.—Ray Le Grande Riley of Sacramento, controller of the State of California, was today elected president of the International Association of Lions Clubs at the thirteenth annual convention here. He takes office immediately, succeeding Ben A. Ruffin of Richmond, Va., as head of the second largest service organization in the world, with 1840 clubs and 70,000 members in every State of the Union, and every province of Canada, and in China Mexico Cuba and Hawaii.

Mr. Riley is descended from pioneers of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. He was born at Vicksburg Mich., was educated there, and at the age of 17 was a licentiate in pharmacy. He was a pharmacist in Michigan, and later at Dillon, Mont., and Colton, Calif., until ten years ago.

Mr. Riley has also rendered long and faithful service in Lionism. After serving as a club president, he was elected district governor of California, and in 1923 was chosen on the board of international directors. He was elected third vice-president in 1926, second vice in 1927, first vice in 1928, and now president.

Although the American chain stores are generally looked upon as a modern institution, the idea is very old. The enormous Mitsui chain system in Japan dates back to 1643. It has been about 70 years since the great chain food store system was organized in this country.

CHAPTER VIII

Without further words Warrill stepped forward and took her into his arms. Desperately Lolita fought off the desire to remain there. His arms were big and strong, and he was just tall enough so that her head lay nicely upon his shoulder; after a second she pushed him away with a mighty shove and stood back, her face flaming, trembling from head to foot. Warrill looked at her in surprise.

"Why, what's the matter with you?" he asked in astonishment. For a moment she did not reply. His eyes were filled with frank desire. Lolita a little vainly reflected that if she had ever seen her fresh young beauty reflected in a man's eyes she saw it so reflected now. That there was color in her cheeks after her brisk walk she knew; and that the last few weeks had taken the anxious, pinched look from her face she also knew. For a moment she was glad of the beauty that was hers, and then again it came to her that it was, after all, hardly more than a curse, for it was forever making life hard for her to live.

She walked over and sat down in a chair, motioned for him to be seated. He slumped down into a chair and lit

a cigarette. After a moment she said directly:

"I understand that you are engaged to marry Miss Pringle." He started, and before he could think a second time ejaculated:

"How did you know? Why, it was only last night that I—"

"Only last night that you became engaged; yet you come here, to my room, tonight. What sort of a man are you?"

Under this biting question he remained for a moment silent.

"Lolita," he began slowly, "surely you, of all persons, can afford to exhibit a little patient understanding when it comes to the vagaries of others. Surely your own experiences with life have been nothing to entitle you to condemn airily without trying to understand motives. I love you, and I do not love Miss Pringle—and yet I am going to marry her. Although she works on a newspaper, it is only as a sort of lark. She is tremendously wealthy; or at least her parents are; she will inherit it all some day."

"I think," gasped Lolita, "that you're despicable. Even if you do not consider me in the matter at all, much as I personally dislike Miss Pringle, I should certainly not wish to see you break her heart by marrying her for her money. I wish that you would please go."

"How can you take such a position?" Warrill objected angrily. "Look at the things you've been involved in, you—"

"I did make one terrible mistake, it is true; but my whole life since then has been, and shall always be, an effort to wipe that out and make up for it in every way possible. I should think that you, of all persons, would be big enough and broad enough to help and not hinder me in my effort to come back."

"I was not thinking of your first mistake, I was thinking of your second one—the gentleman you speak of as Gray Eyes."

"But he's nothing—"

"Naturally you'd say so. And I do believe that he is nothing to you now, but he must have been at some time, although he, too, takes the more than a little absurd position that his interest in you is purely altruistic. Frankly, I don't believe either him or yourself in this connection, and you might as well know it soon as late."

"Then the reason you're going to marry Miss Pringle is that you believe me to be involved in some sort of an affair with Gray Eyes?"

"No, that's not the reason."

"When it's [illegible] of my former—"

"No, that isn't it, either. You are in no way to blame; it's just my own sheer cussedness." He seemed a little uncertain of his course now, a little ashamed of himself. Lolita leaned forward sympathetically.

"Tell me all about it, Mr. Warrill," she begged.

"Well," he began, heartened by her tone, "it's like this. Please try to understand. I have been, as you know, for some years writing for the magazines. I'm getting nowhere. The stuff that I write is cheap commercial drivel, written for a price. I can do better than that, I know. I want a chance to do the very best work that I am capable of, and by marrying Miss Pringle I can do it. She has promised me that I shall not have to worry over financial considerations at all. I shall have a big study to work in, infinite time, and no responsibilities; no necessity for turning out cheap stuff in order to make a living; no necessity for writing advertising copy for the papers that advertise theaters by way of so-called play reviews. Do you see my point? Last night I thought that I would give up the idea, and marry, but, but—" She stopped him.

"Yes, I do," returned Lolita slowly; "I think that you are hopeless. Much as I care for you, I cannot help but think less of you now."

"But you're perfectly silly. Why should you think less of me? You're taking a sentimental view of this whole thing. Your mind is full of the contemporary cant in this country; the French, with their broader contemplation of the moralities, would think nothing of such an arrangement; and, besides, it will be a help to you. I love you, and shall always love you more than anyone else in the world. This will give me a chance to be of some help to you, too, while you are learning to write. I can help you financially, after I've married Miss Pringle."

"Do you think for one minute I'd accept such help from you under those circumstances?"

"You accepted it from Gray Eyes, did you not?"

"But that's very different."

"Different. I think it is much worse, considering the fact that you do not love him. Either way, considering that, you are doing something very small. If you do not intend to make him any return for his money, you are cheating him; if you do intend to, you are lowering yourself, since you admittedly do not love him."

"Then you think that if I let you help me financially, and made some sort of return to you, considering the fact that we love each other, it would be all right, despite Miss Pringle, despite the conventions, despite all of the decencies?"

"There is another phase to the thing, Lolita, that you overlook. We are artists, and therefore not to be bound down by the ordinary conventions that the herd observes. The greatest thing in the world is the ability to create beauty. Those who have that ability, as you and I have, in a measure, should be, and by plain right are, exempted from the observance of the conventions that the Babbits are dedicated to. The creation of beauty is the highest possible form that man's endeavor can take. We should let no petty considerations of any kind interfere with our attempt to do so. I am not alone in this view; almost all of the great, for hundreds of years, have agreed that this is so."

Regardless of that, I don't believe it, I shan't accept the theory, and there is utterly no use in your presenting that fast and loose argument to me. I've started out to make something of myself—and if I do it, I'm going to do it on the 'American plan.'"

"Then, the whole fact of the matter is that you simply don't love me—isn't it?" Before this question Lolita sat silent. The whole fact of the matter was that she did love him, mightily, and it was all that she could do to hold to her determination to win out in the right way or not at all. Her heart was breaking at the thought that he could for one moment consider marrying Miss Pringle for her money.

"I do love you," she said at last in a tone hardly audible.

He rose and crossed to her chair, took both of her hands in his own, pulled her to her feet. Almost brutally he kissed her, and, brutal as the kiss was she gloried in it, for she felt somehow certain that he would never kiss Miss Pringle like that. For a moment she abandoned herself to his kisses and his lips searched her face, her throat, even her bosom.

"Oh, Mr. Warrill, you do love me," she said softly, "drop this mad idea of marrying Miss Pringle—you and I can manage somehow. I'll go without anything, everything. We can work our problem of life out together, and then, if we ever get anywhere, we will have done so by our own efforts cleanly. Please say you will."

"No," he said roughly: "I know what all that means, and I won't drag you through it; you're too beautiful to be marred by the ugly contacts with life that that might call for. Let me make it easy for both of us—please." Suddenly he picked her up bodily and started to carry her across the room.

For one moment delicious resignation took hold of her senses; it was wonderful to be picked up and carried off that way. He laid her down, and she could feel his hot breath upon her as he bent over her, and while every fiber of her being called out for surrender she yet fought back, sat up, pushed him away, stood erect, the tears rolling from her eyes as she saw the expression upon his face—one of such passion that it was horrible.

"Leave the room," she ordered.

He grasped her in his arms again, but with every ounce of strength in her body she fought him off and pushed him away, marveling that she was able to do it despite the fact that she loved him no less for what had nearly transpired.

"If you dare to touch me again," she told him earnestly, "I'll call for help." This sobered him, and he stepped back, his face flushed and angry.

"You haven't always been so particular," he reminded her.

"No," she agreed.

"If you loved me a little more—" he began.

"If I loved you a little less," she denied, "you would have had a better chance of succeeding. As it is, I want you to go, and I do not want you ever to come near me again until you have changed."

"And if I do not change?"

"Then I never want to see you again—ever."

"You mean that?"

"Absolutely."

"Lolita, you're superb."

She did not reply to this. Sitting upon the bed she covered her face with her hands and cried frankly and openly.

"You almost make me change my mind," he said sadly; "but I can't very well now, I can only hope that you will change yours. I think it's big of you to take this position, and all that; still, by and large, it's foolish—and because it is foolish, I think you'll get over it. I'm going now, but I'm coming back soon, and I want you to think things over and try and see them from my viewpoint." She did not reply; and, after a moment, he went to the door, passed through, and presently Lolita heard his feet descending the stairs—for the last time, she reflected. In an agony of torment she threw her slim body full length upon the bed and shook with sobs, realizing, now, that she didn't really want him to go, that, if it were possible to call him back she would accede to his wishes in everything, rather than lose him forever. Yet, as she lay there sobbing, little voices inside of her kept telling her approving, heartening things. At last she sat up dry eyed, thinking intently. For once and for all, under the most trying circumstances imaginable, she had proved to herself that she was able to withstand temptation. The easiest way had been most alluring from every standpoint, yet she had turned from it. A great truth seemed to dawn upon her as she sat there, still as a statue, staring at her reflection in the dresser glass: a misstep in life did not disqualify one but merely made it harder for one to fight and win the ultimate battle. Beyond a doubt, the battle just won was a most decisive one. Things would be different now.

She jumped up, and, though it was late, pulled a trunk out of the closet and opened it. Busily she flew about the room putting her things into it. She would leave the neighborhood, break away from everything and make her own way. When she had succeeded—if she succeeded, she would pay back Gray Eyes every cent that he had spent upon her.

Deep down inside of her, she knew, had been born a new strength of character, a new determination stronger, finer, firmer than ever before, and it was this knowledge that made her happy, even as the additional knowledge that she had not stopped loving Warrill and probably never would made her sad. Forcing thoughts of him from her mind she continued to pack. In the morning she would lose herself so that neither Warrill nor Gray Eyes could possibly find her, and, from that time on, fight her own battle.

In the morning Lolita rose still fully determined to carry out her resolution of the night before. It was a cold, raw, drizzly, typical Chicago day and not one likely to lift the spirits.

When she was dressed, Mrs. Hardy came in with the mail.

"Well, well, why so ambitious this morning?" asked that lady in her usual cheery manner.

"I'm going to leave you," returned Lolita, with sincere regret.

"Not really?"

"Yes, really. I want to get away from everyone, make my own way. I've let people help me out plenty long enough. If the man with the gray eyes wants to know where I've gone, don't tell him anything about me one way or another. Just say I will return what he has spent on me—as soon as I can, I'll take it out there to that roadhouse that he seems to have something to do with."

Mrs. Hardy looked genuinely sad.

"Well, I'm sure sorry to see you go, girlie; yet, I really believe that you're taking the right step. If you ever get into a jam, or there's anything I can possibly do for you, don't hesitate to call me up or drop me a line. Here's your mail—looks like another check—thin envelope." Lolita took the envelope, and Mrs. Hardy went out after repeating her promise to be of aid if needed.

Opening the envelope, Lolita found a check for $80 from a magazine, for another "confession" story she had written—the only story she had had out in the mails; she need not leave a forwarding address.

Lolita succeeded, with a generous

Why do GOODYEARS far outsell any other tires

---if any other tires are "better" or even as good

There is very little difference in the cost of a Goodyear and the cheapest tire you can buy

If you are told that some other tire "was a better tread than the Goodyear" . . . .

Stop and think, if it is actually true, why millions more people buy Goodyear Tires.

If you are told that some other tire "has a better carcass than the Goodyear" . . . .

Before you accept such a statement, stop and think why millions more people buy Goodyear Tires.

There is nothing in this world which compels car owners to choose Goodyear Tires.

If any other tire offered any advantages over a Goodyear, would not the public be buying that other make in largest numbers?

If any other tire equaled a Goodyear, would it not be as popular as Goodyear?

Instead, you find Goodyear producing MILLIONS MORE TIRES than any other company—outdistancing all competition by greatly increasing lengths each year. Stop and think WHY.

Most car owners have had years of experience with tires. They compare their experiences with those of their friends. Tire buyers are wise, very wise, today.

Enthusiastic "talk," strong "claims," advertising that promises everything—your experienced car owner is little impressed by such salesmanship.

The one thing, however, which continues to sell him is this fact, which checks with his personal experience and that of his friends: MILLIONS MORE PEOPLE RIDE ON GOODYEAR TIRES because billions of miles of motoring over roads everywhere continually prove Goodyear Tires to be the best.

Best—not by any small margin—but best by so marked a degree in life, traction, mileage and freedom from trouble that it means a great many dollars saved each year to always buy Goodyears!

tip, in inducing a taxi driver to allow her trunks, of which she had two, to go into the taxi with her. This obviated the necessity of calling an expressman, which would have made it easier for anyone who wished to trace her.

"Drive to the Wilson avenue 'L' station," she directed him, "and get me a morning paper."

After he had made a stop for the paper she told him to drive south. While he did she hurriedly glanced through the paper. There was a classified ad, extolling the desirability of a room for rent near the park. . . . This somewhat interested her and she gave the chauffeur the address.

Presently they arrived before the number, which was just about a quarter of a block from Lincoln park, and Lolita alighted from the taxi, told the driver to wait, and approached a gray stone front house very dignified and pleasant looking though she could see that it was a rather old building. She rang the bell and presently a woman with a dust cap on came to the door.

"I'd like to see the room you have for rent," stated Lolita.

"Awri," replied the lady lazily and led her to a room on the second floor. It was a much smaller room than the one she had had at Mrs. Hardy's, but Lolita reflected that doubtless it was much cheaper and, beside, it had a bay window where she could put her typewriter upon a table and look into the park as she wrote.

"How much?" she inquired, without looking around any further.

"Ten bucks," replied the lady carelessly. Lolita thought this exorbitant, but nevertheless she took out a ten dollar bill and handed it to her. She had the taxi driver bring up her things, paid him off and set to unpacking, thankful that the lady had not recognized her. Nobody seemed ever to connect her with the Lolita Forbes of the newspaper article some months ago. She marveled a little that people should so quickly forget such things; and yet reflected that it was not unusual, so many things happened all the time in Chicago. She had given her correct name with some satisfaction; sailing under a specious flag was unpleasant, it always made her feel dishonest. She decided, however, still to write under the name of Margaret Farrar, since the commercial work she was doing might some day give way to really worth while work to which it would be a pleasure to sign her own name without having people connect it with the "confessions" and other superficial stories done merely for the money by "Margaret Farrar."

When she had her belongings straightened around to some extent she sat down to read the remainder of her morning paper. Turning a page she was made almost breathless by two pictures in the society column.

"Author Will Wed Heiress," the pictures were captioned. One picture was an extremely good likeness of Don Warrill, and the other was a photograph, which had evidently been greatly retouched, of Miss Pringle. The story below the pictures told of a wedding scheduled for June, with a prospective honeymoon in Europe to follow. There was also the usual sentimental blurb about its being a "love match—student falling in love with instructor," etc. It also described Miss Pringle as a young lady of undisputed talents since though she was wealthy she had made a journalist of herself by her own diligent efforts. Lolita wondered if Mr. Warrill could read that part of the article without laughing. She bit her lips to keep back the tears and got up and went to the window and stared off into the park. It was March. In three months Mr. Warrill would be married, would go away to Europe with Miss Pringle. Perhaps they'd talk of her . . . laugh over the little idiot who got herself into such an awful mess. She could almost hear Warrill's rich voice say:

"And there was a time when I thought I was in love with her—can you imagine that, dear?"

Probably Miss Pringle would be unable to imagine it, and would have no

backwardness about saying so—with embellishments. The hot tears rolled down her face as she stood by the window, and she realized that she loved Mr. Warrill just as much as ever—would always love him. Life was indeed cruel.

Determinedly she forced herself to stop thinking in that strain, put on her hat and coat and walked out to get some breakfast somewhere. After breakfast she boarded a car and went downtown, to the main library. An attendant pointed out the file card room and finding the right drawer she came to not less than a hundred and fifty or two hundred books bearing upon the subject of writing in its every possible phase. She selected three that she thought the most interesting and waited while an attendant got the volumes. She remembered the night that she had stayed after class to get Mr. Warrill to sign a library card guarantee for her, recalled how he had remarked that she looked more like a butterfly than a bookworm—would it ever be possible to forget his husky laugh, especially when one knew that some one else was hearing it? Presently the books came and she went out to take a car home.

As the car crawled along, stopping almost at every corner, she forced her mind to busy itself with something more substantial than husky laughs floating through her mind. She decided that she would have to work harder than she had ever worked before, since ninety dollars was now about all she had, and she wanted not only to make a living, but to save up enough to pay back Gray Eyes, and feel under no obligations to him.

To get her mind completely off of Mr. Warrill, she began to mentally plot out a serial. It would be a story about a girl who had actually taken a misstep and who could come back. So many stories of the sort were about pale, cringing little girls who skated along on the edge of wrongdoing, and finally were saved from it; it would be wonderful to get a serial printed that would encourage the many who had actually taken wrong steps and needed help and encouragement and the idea that it was not necessary to keep on going down afterward. Their problem was more acute, and more in need of solution than that of girls who merely "contemplated" wrongdoing. She remembered Harvey Torrence, and what he had represented to her. There had been a time when she honestly believed she loved him with all her heart and soul—and yet his passing had meant little to her. She saw now very clearly what really happened. She had been lonesome, terribly lonesome, alone in a big city. It had been easy then for Harvey to make love to her.

How much better one felt to see and understand the thing in that light, instead of thinking that a deliberate tendency toward badness had caused her false step. How much more people needed education than condemnation. If only more time could be spent in acquiring learning, instead of acquiring a specious knowledge of what persons should be condemned for, what their chances were for going to "hell" if they did this, that, and the other thing. . . . Lolita fairly glowed as she laid out scenes and continuity for a serial that should express this thought to girls who were condemning themselves as bad because of some misstep, set them to fighting back instead of slipping down just because they had done something wrong for which they were honestly sorry.

Suddenly some impulse caused her to look out of the car window, and there before her eyes stood the "bachelor's hotel," where Warrill lived. A terrific wave of depression took her. It seemed as though if she were to stay in the car another moment she would suffocate. She tried to request the motorman to stop at the next corner; but he slid the car by and it was not until the corner after that that he did stop, and she stepped down into the street and walked toward the curb.

She still had the sense almost of suffocation, and the dull, murky atmosphere did not help it any. She laughed a little bitterly to herself as she turned into the park, reflecting upon what a tremendous difference there was between the unquenchable feeling of love she now had for Warrill, and the weak, anemic little love feeling that she had had for Harvey Torrence, and which she had for a time mistaken for the real thing.

She had walked several blocks along the park paths when suddenly, with her head down, she almost ran into a man who blocked her way. She stopped and looked up, into the face of young Watterson. Completely at a loss she stammered:

"Why! I thought your father had sent you to Europe."

"He did," returned Watterson in a peculiarly dry tone, "but things have blown over and I came back. I'm awfully glad I met you. I've wanted to tell you how deeply I regret the terrible trouble I got you into." Somehow she sensed a change in him so profound that it was almost shocking. She gave voice to the thought.

"You've changed."

"Yes. I've changed. It was about time, wasn't it? Killing a man gives a fellow quite a turn. I can't get him out of my mind—and I couldn't get you out of my mind. I'm through with the sort of life that I used to live, on too much money. May I walk a little way with you?"

"Why, yes," said Lolita, a little uncertainly. He fell into step beside her. For about half a block they walked in silence and then he turned to her, and said:

"There is a whole lot that I want to say to you." His tone was so unmistakably earnest, and so different from his usual manner of speech that Lolita was profoundly moved.

Howard E. Morrison has declared his intention of making a race for City Collector, if the government and the powers that be act favorably on the recommendations made Wednesday by the Republican County Committe with reference to the appointment of Ed Hollingsworth to the postmastership. Howard, we believe will make an excellent worker, and will do justice to the office of collector if elected or appointed, as the case might be.

Much fumiddles has been going in the County Republican Camp of late that spells defeat to an office holder who will probably seek re-election the coming year. One of the defeated candidates, who was not on the certified roll of eligibles, wanted the job so bad he could almost taste it, has tried in divers and sundry ways to upset the eligible list, and the story goes, that a last minute appeal was made to the Republican County Committee to kick over the traces and refuse to endorse any of the eligibles and ask for the appointment of the one man who wanted it so bad.

"I have set thee a watchman" formed one topic of the talk delivered to Southeast Missouri editors at Bloomfield by Dean Walter Williams June 18, and with the caution to perform well the duty of protecting the interests of others, The Standard this issue, carries a lengthy article which sets forth to the best of our knowledge the status of the Ozark Fur Farms, Inc. now operating in Cape Girardeau. If our information is wrong, and if the prospective investor in the get-rich-in-three-years idea decides that the investment is sound, let him invest. The Finest New Perfection

There are hundreds of good cooks in Southeast Missouri who will use only New Perfection Oil Stoves and they find some mighty good reasons for their choice. Prospective oil stove buyers will find in our front window this week a sample of the FINEST OIL Stove MADE BY THE PERFECTION COMPANY. It Is truly a beautiful piece of merchandise in pure-white enamel with a large built-in oven that is guaranteed to work perfectly.

A New Privilege On Good Rugs

The Mohawk Rug Mills (among the best in the country) have fitted us out with a rack of samples of small rugs from which we can fill orders in a very short time for any size or quality rug you may wish, including the finest of Wiltons in Imperial Karnak grade. Due to this arrangement S. E. Missouri rug buyers have a larger selection of patterns from which to choose than are shown in many city stores and you can see exactly what you are buying. In addition to this privilege we always carry a representative stock of staple sizes in Velvets and Axminsters ready for immediate delivery.

Are You From Missouri?

Go where you will. St. Louis, Cape, Cairo, or any other burg and look at bedroom suites from $125.00 to $200.00. Then examine the new arrivals at our store closely—construction as well as beauty of lines. If you'll do this and give us a fair shake we'll get the business. For further particulars drop in and see some of the prettiest numbers ever in Charleston at prices named.

Living Room Suites, Too

The above paragraph relating to bedroom suites applies also to the present stock of living room suites. Everyone of them is a new one right from the factory in recent shipments. The living room is the one in which you entertain company and therefore should receive first attention. "Putting the best foot forward" is a custom of the age to which most of us subscribe either consciously or unconsciously. Most families carry the practice into home furnishing and to those folks our pretty living room items will make a special appeal.

Everything In Refrigerators

From the General Electric on down to a low priced refrigerator we have on hand every size required for family use. Because of numerous trades on G-E's in which used refrigerators were taken as part pay the stock of good second hand ones is growing and special prices are being quoted to move them. You can find what you want here in refrigerators for less.

Special Range Terms to Farmers

The Monarch factory backs us in offering special terms on ranges to farmers whereby the payments may be made twice or three times a year until cancelled. Even yearly payments are available to those who require them. There's no better farm range made than a Monarch Malleable and we are here to back up every one sold without question or delay.

Bonus On Refrigerators And Oil Stoves

To "pep up" sales on refrigerators and oil stoves we have procured a lot of 32-piece dinner sets in pretty decorated semi-procelaine and also a number of colored granite cooking vessels in six-piece sets which will be given away with purchases of either oil stoves or refrigerators. On any refrigerator or oil stove sold for $25.00 or more choice of either of these pretty and useful sets may be had. The sets sell regularly for $6.00. See them in front window.

SAVE-A-LIFE WORK INTO THIRD WEEK

The beginning of the third week of the Save-a-Life period declared by the proclamation of Gov. Henry S Caulfield follows two weeks of great activity and of increased safety on the streets and highways of the State of Missouri. Statistics from the campaign will not be available until after July 1, but reports from cities and towns in the State indicate that accidents have been reduced and that the death toll is much smaller.

Automobile service shops and dealers from all over the State are reporting to the Motor Vehicle Commissioner of Missouri at Jefferson City that their shops are being crowded with motorists asking for free inspections. One St. Louis shop in two weeks inspected 240 automobiles. Another inspected 180 automobiles. A Kansas City shop inspected 140 automobiles in the two weeks. It is hoped that this rate of inspection will be maintained all over the State. If it is it would mean that not less than 450,000 of the State's 675,000 motor cars will have been inspected at the close of the Save-a-Life period, July 1.

In the inspection stations much attention is given to brakes as being the most dangerous of all of the mechanical parts of an automobile. To be safe cars equipped with two-wheel brakes should be able to stop in nine feet going ten miles an hour, 37 feet at 20 miles an hour and 83 feet at 30 miles an hour. Equipped with four-wheel brakes, a car should be stopped in 6 feet going at 10 miles an hour, 24 feet at 20 miles an hour and 55 feet at thirty miles an hour. It will be the purpose of inspectors to see that the cars do stop in those instances in order to be perfectly safe on the highways.

Several Chambers of Commerce in Missouri towns have floated banners across the street from their offices, asking citizens to have the cars inspected. Chiefs of Police in many of the towns have instructed their police officers to suggest inspections to motorists whose cars do not bear the red inspection sticker. The Chief of Police of St. Louis has agreed the last ten days of the campaign to have his officers distribute notification cards to all motorists whose cars do not bear the inspection sticker. This will probably also be done in Kansas City and some of the larger cities of the State

Proclamations similar to those issued by Gov. Caulfield have been issued by mayors of a number of cities including the mayors of Boonville, Higginsville, Glendale, Maplewood, Ferguson, Jefferson City, University City, Warrensburg and Orrick.

It has been the purpose of the Secretary of State of Missouri to appoint free inspection stations in every town and city in Missouri. This would mean that practically every dealer in automobiles and most of the independent repair shops have had this official appointment and inspections can therefore, be made at any service shop in the State.

COMING—Nancy Carroll and Gary Cooper in "THE SHOPWORN ANGEL", Lily Damita and Don Alvarado in "THE BRIDGE OF SAN LUIS REY", Lily Damita and Ronald Colman in "THE RESCUE"

J. W. Bowlre, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of the Frisco Lines and Otis Embry, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen of the Frisco Lines, each recently wrote to Gov. Caulfield asking that in radio talks and addresses made in behalf of the Save-a-Life period that citizens of Missouri be cautioned about the danger at railroad crossings. Governor Caulfield has referred this communication to the campiagn director, Major Robert E. Lee of St. Louis, for action.

The campaign is proving so successful that there is some talk among the service stations of extending it fifteen days or until July 15. Announcemsnt of this extension, if made, will be made later.

NEW MADRID COUNTY FARM BUREAU NEWS

Melon growers can make a better crop by the use of a few simple practices according to County Agent Julian. If fertilizer is available, side dress the melon hills, put a single handful of fertilizer around each hill, scatered in a circle not getting further out from the hill than two feet and not dropping it on the plants as it will burn them. Take a little dirt over the fertilizer to prevent washing and to help dissolve.

The melons should be thinned to one plant to the hill, cultivation should continue as long as the vines can be handled after which two rows of peas may be drilled down each middle. Pruning is very essential prune off all melons except two or three of the best ones as soon as they are the size of a quart cup, keep on pruning. Each time that a load is cut, prune off all dinks, goose necks, and rotten ended ones.

If anthracnose shows up and causes the leaves to start firing, get bordeaux mixture powder and put one pound in six gallons of water and spray thoroughly to stop it. And by all means get a stacker who knows how to stack when loading a car.

Regular cultivation is absolutely necessary during dry weather says County Agent Julian.

Even though the field is clean and cultivation does nothing apparently but raise a dust, it is essential that it be continued, because it is more necessary in dry weather that moisture be conserved. Regular cultivation keeps a mulch and prevents the soil from packing which in turn holds the moisture that comes to the surface through capillary action. Any farmer knows from experience that moisture collects under boards, papers or any covering, and if he stops to think, he will realize that it will collect in the same manner under a dust mulch. If the mulch is there, the moisture will not escape, when the ground is packed and no mulch the moisture comes to the top of the ground and evaporates rapidly which results in a continual and steady loss of moisture that is going on at all times. Keep up the cultivation and save the moisture.

OIL CAN AIDS HITCH HIKER IN CROSS COUNTRY TRIP

Here's a new idea for hitch hiking, or getting a ride along the highway and it is such a clever one that most anyone would succumb to it. Recently a resident of this city while driving home from a city near here, saw a young man trudging along the highway with a new five-gallon can. "Here's a chap out of gasoline and I will give him a lift" thought the Carrollton man and setting the idea to action, he stopped and took the walker in.

"Run out of gasoline?" he queried. "No", the boy replied. "It's just an idea that's working out fine. A few days ago I left home in Ohio for Kansas, where I expect to spend the summer. I was carrying my clothes in a grip and I walked all day without a solitary lift. I went to a hardware store, bought this gasoline can took a can opener and carefully slit the top all around the edge with the exception of a few inches which would act as a hinge. I then put my clothes in the can and discarded the handbag. With this outfit I started down the highway until a man picked me up He thought just like you, that I was out of gasoline, but when I told him my ruse, he jst laghed and took many miles off".

The Carrollton man laghed, too and thought the joke good enough to buy the boy a meal when he reached Carrollton, and sent him on his way rejoicing—with his gasoline can which is not a can at all, but a camouflaged valise and a come-one, all in one.

No doubt the next time he hears of this Knight of the Road, he will be will be president of a bank—or robbing one—or maybe both.—Carrollton Democrat.

CAPE-BLUFF ROUTE PLANNED BY BOARD

Poplar Bluff, June 18.—The Missouri Highway Commission has decided upon the route of the Poplar Bluff-Cape Girardeau Highway, according to information received here today. The route has been discussed and the construction urged by not only the two largest cities of Southeast Missouri, but by intermediate towns, for more than five years.

It is proposed that the route shall leave Cape Girardeau over Highway 74 to Dutchtown, thence over Highway 25 to Advance, from where a farm to market road will be run to Kinder, in Stoddard County. This will connect with the constructed section of Highway 51 to Puxico.

From Puxico the route will run almost directly to Fisk, where it will intersect Highway 60, and then to Poplar Bluff.

It was planned to have this road extend from Puxico straight into Poplar Bluff, but this would run it through a low section and construction cost would be too great, the highway department has held. It also would necessitate construction of another bridge over the St. Francis River. The department is to construct a $225,000 bridge at Fisk, which will serve both routes.

Since adjournment of the legislative session, the department has been busy compiling a new edition of the Game and Fish Laws of Missouri. That the public generally, and especially the sportsmen are interested in strict observance of the Game and Fish Laws is evidenced by the numerous requests sent in for copies of the 1929 number. This edition will be ready for distribution some time during July, when copies will be issued to all inquiries.
